SEEK PROBE OF BRITISH 'WAR' AGENT

Three Senators Make Joint Request for Study of Lobbying.

NOEL COWARD MENTIONED

English Knight Quoted as Saying He'll Get U. S. Into Present War.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A double-barreled investigation into the activities of Sir George Paish, British economist who boasted to a United States senator that he was responsible for getting America into the last war, and that he was going to get this country into the present war, was demanded today.

Three senators united in requests that the department of state and justice probe the lobbying of the British knight, who admitted to Senator Wheeler (D.) Mont., that he was in the United States to put over a four-point program to aid Great Britain.

Wheeler, who was told by Paish that he would "be bound to vote" for American entrance into the war on the side of England, said that Sir George's four points are: 1. Get the conscription bill passed. 2. Get 50 American destroyers for Great Britain. 3 Repeal of the Johnson act. (This act prevents the United States from loaning money to nations defaulting World war debts.) 4 Create an alliance with Great Britain.

Wheeler, in a senate speech, said Sir George told him: "I (Sir George) am responsible for getting this country into the last war and I intend to get it into this one."

But Sir George complained to reporters today that the senator did not quote him correctly, explaining:

"What I said was that I am the man who helped get this country into the last war and I intend to present the facts to the American people and let them decide if they should get into this war."

The British embassy says that Sir George is in this country "entirely in a private capacity" and has no official connection.

Paish last week had a conference with President Roosevelt and at that time told reporters he was going to see Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee.

The senators who demanded

Ordered To Wear Pajamas Or Quit Walking In Sleep

CHICAGO — (INS) — John Kubovicz, 21, was under court compulsion today to buy pajamas or stop walking in his sleep. The alternative given him was to pay a $100 fine for indecent exposure.

Kubovicz was brought to court by his next door neighbor, Mrs. Beverly Mysza, who charged she awakened one night to find the youth on her fire escape, nude.

"I'm a sleepwalker," Kubovicz explained, "and I sleep in the nude because I'm allergic to pajamas."

Judge J. M. Braude was sympathetic, but ordered Kubovicz to lose his allergy or pay the fine.

PENSION LIST REACHES PEAK

Chief Reports All-Time High In Benefit Payments to Aged.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The number of persons receiving aid for aged in Ohio stands at an all-time high level—127,484—Tom McCaw, state pension chief, declared today.

In August, 1,791 applicants were added to the rolls, pensions for this month totalling $2,915,426, an increase of $16,470 over July. Since a special session of the legislature made new funds available for pensions two months ago 7200 applications have been granted.

BANDITS ESCAPE

Pair Slugs Bank Messenger to Make $3,900 Payroll Haul.

BOSTON — (INS) — Two armed bandits in a stolen automobile outdistanced a police pursuit of several miles today and escaped with a $3,900 payroll after holding up Walter Rockwell, a bank messenger, in suburban Roxbury. The two men jumped aboard Rockwell's car, forced him to halt, then slugged him and sped away in their stolen machine with the payroll.

City Airport Attracts 2 Plane Firms

Inquiries Are Dispatched to Mansfield on Air Facilities.

At least two airplane companies are interested in Mansfield's municipal airport as a possible site for construction of manufacturing plants.

This was disclosed today by James R. Harrington, airport manager, who said he had received inquiries concerning the port from two different sources.

The inquiries were believed to have been in response from data sent to the nation's leading airplane and airplane parts manufacturers several weeks ago by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's letters which were accompanied by a commercial survey of the city and surrounding territory cited the advantages of Mansfield as the location for the aviation industry.

Harrington said his inquiries came from a northern Ohio airplane manufacturer and a Dayton law firm.

Both, he said, were interested in the size of the field, its condition, particularly in the matter of runways. One inquiry asked for information concerning the condition of the field during the spring months when frost is leaving the ground.

Harrington said he answered both letters, explaining that with the condition of the present runways that landings and takeoffs were practically impossible for about five weeks during the spring.

However, it was learned today that a $40,000 National Youth administration proposal to improve the port had already been given approval of state NYA officials and was in Washington for final approval.

The project which would employ 100 Richland county youths for about a year calls for resodding the runways to correct the condition cited by Harrington. It also includes the development of a state roadside park on the port property and construction of an administration building.

Conscription Bill Nears Vote In Senate; Barkley Predicts Passage

WEEK'S SECOND NIGHT SESSION SET FOR TODAY

Majority Leader Expects That Measure Will Pass With 'Substantial Margins.'

STUDY SUBSTITUTE PLANS

Senators Act on Amendments, Limit Service to New World Areas.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The senate today temporarily set aside consideration of amendment to the military conscription bill to hear Sen. Johnson (D., Colo.) declare in a lengthy speech that a peacetime draft would strike a deathblow at democracy through adoption of Hitler methods.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The senate drove down the home stretch today toward a decision on conscription, concentrating immediate attention on three substitute proposals which must be acted upon before a final vote can be taken on the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill.

Scheduling the second night session of the week, Senator Barkley (D., Ky.) predicted passage of the measure—in a form calling for immediate conscription of manpower—before the day's end.

The majority leader told reporters he was confident that the senate would reject by "comfortable" margins all three proposals to postpone conscription and send the Burke-Wadsworth measure to the house in about the form it stood when debate began today.

Working until 10 p. m (EST) last night, while packed galleries looked on, the chamber wrote into the measure a dozen amendments, some only technical and clarifying, but others that imposed restrictions on the use of men conscripted for service.

Chief of these was an amend-

Paving Leaves Stores Empty, Cash Registers Silent on Fourth Street

Business Men Relate They're Losing From 20 To 65 Per Cent As Street Construction Blocks Customers

BULLETIN

Shortly after noon, workmen started temporary work on the Walnut intersection of West Fourth street to permit traffic to use Walnut street across the paving project.

Their places of business practically empty, Fourth street business men told a story of staggering business losses today—due to the closing of the street for paving.

Estimates of losses in business volume ranged from 20 per cent to 65 per cent And with the Mulberry street intersection closed, in addition to the one at Walnut street which has been closed for three weeks, merchants in that block expressed the fear that losses would mount even higher.

Parts of the street from Diamond to Mulberry have been closed to traffic since July 8, seven weeks ago. The North Walnut street crossing was closed on Aug. 7.

Don Wilson, superintendent on the job for the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, which is doing the work with WPA labor, said laying of brick would start next week, after Labor day, but could give no estimate of when the three-block section of the street might be open. Pouring concrete started this morning on the north side of the street at the Diamond street end of the job.

After the concrete is laid, brick goes on top of it in the center sections. Curb strips are of concrete.

The entire street from Diamond west to the city limits is to be improved. Sections of it in the residential district have been torn up. It seemed likely today that the street near the John Simpson junior high school would be torn up for a time during the first weeks of school, which opens a week from tomorrow.

One West Fourth business man said that if he had known the street was to be closed so long, he would have urged fellow mer-

GIRL, 4, HURT

A four-year-old girl was in General hospital today as a result of injuries sustained when she ran in front of an automobile, while she was playing near her home yesterday.

The girl, Janet Hemperly, Bahl avenue, R. D. 4, Mansfield, was treated at the hospital for a fractured leg and cuts and bruises, according to hospital officials.

The car, which was driven by Willard Lockhart, 21, Mansfield, was going east on Bahl avenue when the girl suddenly darted in front of his vehicle, the Mansfield highway patrol reported.

Start Trek To Postoffice As Alien Registration Opens

(Picture on Page 2)

Aliens from Mansfield and vicinity began their march to the postoffice, as registration for all aliens over 14 years of age got under way today.

In the first few hours this morning more than 30 aliens had applied for application blanks and the number was expected to pass 50 by noon, according to Postmaster H. E. Homberger.

Those who must register, Homberger said, are any foreign-born person or alien, 14 years of age or over, and any alien who has applied for naturalization papers but who is not yet a full citizen.

Homberger also stressed today that registration is "absolutely compulsory." Aliens failing to be registered by Dec. 26 are subject to $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment.

Distribution of application blanks is being handled by Homberger and William T. Houston, assistant postmaster.

It is expected, however, that when the actual registration and fingerprinting begins the postoffice may have to hire additional help.

"The alien must first apply for an application blank," Homberger said. "After he takes this blank home and fills it out, the applicant returns to the postoffice with the blank."

"It is from this that we get the necessary information to put on the actual registration form. The alien, after he swears to the truth of his statements, is then fingerprinted directly on the blank."

Registration and fingerprinting will take place in the Civil Service chambers on the second floor of the postoffice, where aliens return with their application blanks, Homberger explained.

OFFER 7 BIDS ON PARK METERS

Two Firms List Proposals on Automatic Devices and Five on Manually Operated.

The city board of control today was studying bids submitted by seven firms on the purchase of 500 parking meters to be installed in downtown Mansfield on a nine-month trial basis.

The bids were opened yesterday by the board which is composed of Mayor William J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M Crafton.

Crafton said it would probably be several weeks before a contract is let. He said the board wanted to minutely examine each type of meter and submit them to tests before deciding.

There were bids on two types of machines. Two companies entered proposals on automatically controlled meters and five firms turned in bids on manually operated devices.

The Dual Parking Meter company, Oklahoma City, Okla., one of the two firms which bid on automatic meters, quoted a price of $49.50 for a nickel machine, rentable at $3.50 per month for nine months with option of purchase at $18. On the company's deluxe model, it listed a unit price of $56.50, with final purchase price of $25.

The firm also submitted bids on

German Attack Slows Up, RAF Bombers Busy

British Planes Raid Objectives in Germany, Italy; Few Nazi Ships Sighted Over Island After Long London Night Raid

BULLETIN

BUDAPEST — AP) — Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest today reported a bloody border clash between Rumanian and Russian troops, resulting in hundreds dead on both sides.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—German bombers attacked a convoy of ships off the coast of Scotland for more than an hour today.

(By United Press)

LONDON — German daylight raiding planes roared over scattered coastal sectors of southern England again today after the Royal Air Force had dumped tons of high explosives on military objectives in Germany and northern Italy.

German planes were reported to have raided both the southeast and southwest areas during the afternoon but up to 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) it appeared that daylight action had been the lightest for several days. Only a single German reconnaissance plane had been sighted off the Dover channel coast.

Six tons of bombs were dropped on important Italian war factories in the Turin and Milan districts and on important military objectives in Germany, according to official London statements after a night of new air raid alarms in both London and Berlin.

The RAF pilots report many big explosions and a number of fires following their attacks on the Italian Fiat automobile plant, which makes airplane motors, and a big magneto plant near Milan.

Aerial warfare during the night was carried on relentlessly by both British and German air fleets.

(The Italian war communique admitted British bombings of Turin, Milan and Pavia, but the German high command's communique, while admitting penetration of Germany by British planes, said that damage was slight.)

New but lighter German aerial onslaughts today followed on raids over 500 miles of coastline and another prolonged air raid alarm in the London area. The night raids caused heavy material damage and casualties in the Midlands.

Damage was slight in London.

Raiding planes came singly or in pairs through a large part of the night and seemed bent largely on keeping Londoners awake. That they did this was evident by the tired faces of workers reporting for early morning shifts in the London area.

High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on many parts of England, and it was asserted that German planes continued to machine gun civilians.

The real fury of the night's at-

TOUGHER: Italian Press Threatens War With Egypt

(By United Press)

ROME—Italy's supervised press threatened today that an Italian declaration of war against Egypt is imminent because of Egyptian aid to Great Britain.

Egypt is a threat to Italy, warned Virginio Gayda, who frequently voices the opinion of Premier Benito Mussolini—a threat which will be "eliminated."

The sword is the only answer to Egypt, chorused the newspaper of Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

The threat of a declaration of war—presumably preliminary to offensive action against Egypt—coincided with a report by the Italian high command of new British bombing attacks on northern Italian cities.

The high command reported a hangar of the Fiat airplane works at Turin was hit and that other bombs fell on the San Luigi sanitarium at Turin. One British bomber was reported shot down at Turin and one person was killed and another injured near Pavia.

Gayda, writing in the Giornale D'Italia, took note of the resignation of Premier Hassan Sabri Pasha of Egypt who has been instructed by King Farouk to form a new cabinet.

Hassan, Gayda charged, is anti-Italian and supports a policy which is dangerous to Italy. Therefore, Gayda said, Italy must fight the threat of Egypt.

SPEED: Swift Action Taken By Joint U. S.-Canada Board

(By International News Service)

OTTAWA, Ont.—Discarding all time-consuming formalities, members of the Canada-United States permanent joint defense board worked at top speed today as they continued their collaboration on the task of constructing a common Canadian-American front, military as well as economic, against the European dictators

That joint economic as well as military defense was being considered was disclosed by Mayor F. H La Guardia, of New York, chairman of the American section of the board

"This work is the Monroe Doctrine translated into action," the mayor proclaimed after the opening day's conferences which began in the historic Canadian parliament buildings and continued at a dinner given by J. P. Moffat, the American minister to Canada, at his home.

"We are considering all phases of defense, including the economic phase," the mayor emphasized.

The conversations were kept secret and guarded and Mayor La Guardia said the first task of the board was to keep them so.

Nevertheless, it was hinted that one of the subject. to be broached by the Canadian members was the possibility of relaxing the U. S. neutrality laws so that Canada could borrow in America to finance its war aid to Great Britain. Canada's war needs in armaments and machines were believed to have been outlined in great detail.

Ohio Legion to Elect Successor to Gardner Today

CONNEAUT VET STILL FAVORED AS NEW CHIEF

Toledo Convention Votes For Strong Defense Program With School Training.

Ohio Legionnaires turned today to the selection of new state officers after advocating a strong defense program which would inaugurate military training in high schools.

Ralph H. Stone of Conneaut still was unopposed to succeed department Commander R. B. Gardner of Mansfield as the Legion's 22nd annual state convention entered its final sessions in Toledo.

Contests appeared for other offices, with Floyd Hartpence of Westerville and Russell Cunningham of Lancaster seeking the vice commander's post; Rev. Allan H. Brown of Ashtabula and Rev. Ignatius Lee of Hillsboro, chaplain; and Glen Huber of Hicksville and J. E. Giffin of Bellaire, treasurer.

Past Commander Eli A. Jensen of Springfield was the lone candidate for national committeemen to succeed James R. Favret of Cincinnati.

The Legion expressed its opinion yesterday concerning national defense with approval of a proposed program which would establish junior reserve officer training corps in high schools throughout the state.

Delegates recommended the department commander appoint a committee to study the feasibility of establishing such units.

Colleges and universities supported by public funds should be required to give military training, the convention declared. Other defense resolutions recommended approval of war department proposals for procuring military personnel; and enactment of legislation to ban un-American groups and suppress subversive activities.

"The United States should forthwith take whatever steps may be necessary to insure adequate defense of America, regardless of the outcome of the present war," the convention declared.

Heated debate developed over proposals for increased aid to Great Britain, repeal of the United States neutrality amendment and a stand on conscription. Resolutions on these subjects ultimately were tabled.

Delegates approved a resolution to protest against educational systems employing instructors who teach un-American or un-patriotic doctrines.

The traditional parade followed yesterday's business session. A three-mile-long procession moved through Toledo's downtown district. Legion officials said 19,000 took part and estimated 100,000 spectators looked on despite rain and cold weather.

Council's Sure Cleveland Will Win That Pennant

Council ordered Frank E. Bubna, commissioner of federal relations, to proceed with full plans for construction of a pedestrian ramp from Lakeside avenue to Gate D, on the southeast corner of Cleveland stadium, in order to accommodate the rush of fans for a World Series.

The ramp, estimated to cost $8,000, would alleviate traffic jams by opening four pedestrian lanes. At present vehicles and fans walking to the stadium pour onto the same two bridges and create a difficult situation.

Up and Down THE STREET

Reddest face in Mansfield the other morning belonged to a retired police officer, C. B. Gray, who lives up Poplar street way. While walking up Poplar street, sans shirt, a neighbor called to him from an upstairs window. When the officer looked up he unwittingly pulled in his ample stomach, and before you could say "thirty days" his trousers had dropped quietly to the sidewalk. The officer's dash for home is still the talk of the neighborhood, where a movement is on foot to buy him a pair of suspenders.

MAPPING FIGHT ON PARALYSIS

Health Director Confers With Foundation Leader as Disease Hits Ohio.

COLUMBUS—State Health Director R. H. Markwith conferred with Dr. Don W. Gudakust, medical director of the national foundation for infantile paralysis, today as eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in Ohio.

Gudakunst said he was visiting areas where "large numbers" of infantile paralysis cases had appeared lately. He will determine what aid the foundation can give to alleviate the outbreaks.

He and Markwith discussed the Ohio situation where 120 cases including nine deaths have developed since June 10.

The foundation, located in New York, has special splints available for loan to localities. These splints are used to arrest muscular contraction and permanent deformation in paralysis victims.

The foundation will assist in obtaining "iron lungs" for patients. Ohio has 15 of the artificial "lungs."

Worst affected by the current infantile paralysis outbreak are West Virginia, Indiana, Kansas and Ohio, Dr. Gudakunst said. New cases today included four in Lawrence county and one each in Wayne, Hamilton, Medina and Logan counties.

MANSFIELD WOMEN WINNERS IN STATE FAIR NEEDLEWORK SHOW

Two Mansfield women were among the winners today in the needlework exhibits at the Ohio State fair.

Mrs. Benton F. Beal, 165 Marion avenue, shared honors with Mrs. Nellie Hart of Cincinnati, in winning the major share of prizes in needlework submitted by women over 70.

Mrs. J. W. Leistensnider of 87 Greenwood avenue, won a sweepstake prize on a quilt she exhibited and also won a first prize for the most artistic quilt exhibited.

Mrs. Beal exhibited rugs, quilts, crochet work and other needlework articles.

Governor John W. Bricker is scheduled to make his first official visit to the fair today in a parade which will start at the courthouse and be reviewed at the race track grandstand.

At the junior fair, the governor will receive a "state farmer" key from the president of the Future Farmers. He also will speak at state highway patrol headquarters, appearing later at the night horse show to award trophies to the owners of champion colts in the draft horse classes.

Yesterday was ladies' day and approximately 50,000 were admitted free. The throng disregarded rain and 80-degree temperature.

The fair's amusement area was minus three exhibits today on orders from State Agriculture Director John T. Brown.

The director ordered the closing of two penny arcades and the Congress of Oddities, declaring they were "below the standards at the state fair."

The freak show closed by Brown had about 20 exhibits, including "Christine, the crocodile girl," "Zolla, the human jigsaw puzzle," "old funny face, the rubber man," and "the monkey people from Montevideo."

The same show appeared in Mansfield at the county fair. At that time the show did not include the exhibits, which Brown criticized.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—An excess profits tax bill with provisions designed to protect small and weak corporations awaited only formal drafting today before being introduced in the house.

The house ways and means committee agreed unanimously on the measure late yesterday after increasing the rate schedule and raising the minimum exemptions.

Instead of a single schedule carrying rates from 25 to 40 per cent the committee decided on two, with rates from 20 to 50 per cent. A minimum credit against the excess profits tax of six per cent return on the first $500,000 of invested capital was increased to seven per cent.

There were other less important, last minute changes, but these two provide a "substantial" increase in the anticipated revenue. Experts have not submitted official figures, but it was estimated unofficially that the bill might yield $300,000,000 on 1940 corporation income instead of $165,000,000.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the ways and means committee, who said he "couldn't be happier over anything" than that his group had agreed unanimously on so complicated and important a subject as excess profits taxes, expects to be able to introduce the bill today.

If the draft is completed in time, the house can begin consideration—and possibly pass the bill — on Thursday, Doughton thought.

In its present form the bill covers three fields:

1. Suspension of the profits limitations imposed on airplane and warship manufacturers under government contracts.

2. An amortization or write-off program to permit manufacturers of national defense materials to recapture the cost of plant expansion in five years.

3. The excess profits tax.

The profits tax will apply only to corporations, and not to individuals or partnerships. As a basis for determining what are "excess" profits, the bill selects the 1936 to 1939 inclusive, to be known as "base period years."

Miss Midnight's Diary:

Dear Diary: The thing that fascinates me most these evenings is Tom Mix's wardrobe. I can pass Lucius Beebe any night in the bar at 21 without doing a double take, no matter how plainly he is attired, and I can now gaze at Tommy Manville and not flinch, even when he is wearing his triple-breasted pearl gray dinner jacket with the Alice blue satin lapels. But Brother Mix really has me; I just sit in the Stork Club or some other bistro staring at him in abject fascination, and goodness knows how much excitement I miss when he is around.

Part of the fascination lies in the contradiction between Tom's face and his clothes. You somehow do not expect a fellow with a stern granite pan, whose best friend is a horse, to be dolled up in fancy suits which must keep him home nights whipping up designs.

It is hard to describe the suits, but I think my favorite is the pale beige one with the yoke piped in brown, and the pleats.

Tom was right in the swing at LaConga Saturday night. He charged right into the conga line, mixing with such experts as Zorina, Ben Blue, and Peggy Fears. Ringsiding, but not conga-ing, were Sally Eilers and Joan Bennett with Walter Wanger, and a few tables away was Gloria Swanson, who never seems to get a day older.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, back from a flying trip to her home in Virginia, reported that her mother, who has been very ill, is much better. Her absence from town apparently didn't affect Peggy's popularity with the stag line; she was escorted by not one, but two, handsome beaux!

When a place is jammed to the doors on a Monday night in the summer time, then I suppose it is what you would call a smash hit and I begin to wonder what will happen to Fefe's Cafe Pierre when autumn comes and people get back to town and the season is really on.

Anyway, the situation was pretty tense when I dropped in; the floor was so packed Joan Edwards had to sing facing the orchestra (reminded me of the time a night club was so crowded a girl named Helen Morgan had to sing sitting on the piano) and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Nelson and Laurence Rockefeller, and Tommy Manville were standing in the entrance waiting for seats. Sandwiched into small spaces around the room were Ray Bolger, Marie Spaulding, Mrs. Wanamaker Munn, Franchot Tone, Arlene Judge and Nancy Carroll.

I think Miss Judge and Miss Carroll have taken root in the place, and are now just part of the standard decorations, like the murals

Into Toots Shor's early American boite that same evening strolled a disconsolate young man in those bright and unmatched clothes peculiar to Hollywood. He was Jimmy Van Heusen, the songwriter whose tunes are currently monopolizing the Hit Parade, and all he wanted was a steak and somebody to talk to.

It seems that Jimmy got a little bored and fed up with Hollywood and pictures, and terribly homesick for his pals in New York. So he hopped a plane to Manhattan, just to get a look at the old faces.

* * *

There was a lot of "don't-look-now-ing" going on at the St. Regis Viennese Roof the other dinner-time because Richard Greene, Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger, the James Farleys, Ambassador to Poland Anthony Biddle, George Abbott and Robert Sherwood were among those who sat out the waltzes.

There were no autograph complications over Miss Bennett's dark-haired resemblance to Miss LaMarr, but there was an observation on the subject at the next table.

"I liked her better," a young man said wistfully, "when she looked like Joan Bennett."

* * *

The tailored-suit and shirt fad, which started with Ethel Merman's appearance in semi-masculine garb, has spread to another glamor gal. Zorina turned up at the Savoy-Plaza lounge in a gray, pin-striped suit and mannish shirt, and looked very bewitching. I suppose in another two weeks there won't be a frill left in town, if you know what I mean.

Draped around the room chortling over John Buckmaster were the John Jacob Astors, Horace Dodge and his daughter Delphine, Dan Topping and Sonja Henie, Ethel Merman and Mrs. Aileen Brindsley-Plunkett, whose name I consider one of the most fascinating in circulation.

Miss Merman chatted after the show with Buckmaster, and wound up her conversation by saying, "Your French is wonderful. I wish you'd tell me what you were saying."

"Your guess is as good as mine," replied John. "That was double talk!"

FINED $10 ON ASSAULT COUNT

Highway Maintenance Superintendent Appears in Court.

James McMillen, state highway maintenance superintendent for Richland county, was fined $10 and costs in municipal court on a charge of assault and battery Saturday, after the case had been continued for four weeks.

McMillen was arrested early in August and the case was first continued to Aug. 12 and then was postponed, while he was at liberty under $500 bond. He was arrested on an affidavit signed by Thomas DeVine, Ninth avenue, who said that McMillen had knocked him down a few days after he was released from General hospital. The altercation followed a political argument.

McMillen had pleaded innocent.

CENSUS FIGURE WORRIES OHIO CONGRESSMEN

Reduction in Seat Number Threatened If State Growth Lags.

By EARL BERKLEY

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Ohioans are anxiously awaiting the 1940 census returns.

The population count might mean a reduction in the state's representation in congress. It depends apparently on whether Ohio's growth has kept pace with the country-wide gain, but this isn't expected.

Several Buckeye members are pondering whether to ask congress to change the method of apportionment if the new census cuts their number of seats.

Census returns to date indicate a shift that might reduce the state's house membership from 24 to 23 unless the population growth at least equals the national increase, or unless the apportionment law is changed.

Officials said figures on the Buckeye state's 1940 population would be completed within a few weeks.

Reapportionment on the basis of the new census would proceed unless congress acted promptly

Ohio's house seats were increased in 1932 from 22 to 24 on the basis of the 1930 census allowing one representative for each 281,000 population. The state's population then was 6,646 697.

Census bureau statisticians said indications were that the country's 1940 population would approximate 132,000,000. This would mean one representative for approximately each 300,000 population, and Ohio would need a population in excess of 7,000,000 in order to retain its 24 seats.

Preliminary estimates indicate the state's population increased by about 275,000 since 1930, a sizeable gain but not enough to assure retention of 24 house posts if the country's total population went to 131,000,000 or 132,000,000, necessitating an increase in the number of citizens for each member, under present law.

Census officials reported that the nation's average population gain since 1930 probably would be 6.5 per cent. Thus states which increased substantially more than that could look forward to getting more house seats. Those which failed to gain as much or declined might lose seats.

Ohio would face the latter prospect unless its 1940 population was around 7,200,000, house members believed.

The number of representatives for each portion of the population is determined by dividing the country's total by 435, the number of house members since 1910.

Congress can evolve any manner of apportionment it pleases. It could increase the total number of seats beyond 435, revise the percentage of population for each seat, or take other action to prevent a reduction in states such as Ohio.

There would be the problem, however, of making a revision acceptable to all states, particularly those which stood to gain seats by the new census

In any event, reapportionment will not be made prior to this year's presidential elections. Even if congress decided not to change the present law, it is unlikely that new seating would go into effect before 1944

Ohioans said they were confident of co-operation in any effort to prevent reductions in representation. They noted that a number of other states were in similar situations and suggested that there would be concerted agitation for congressional action

Early returns indicate that shifts under the present apportionment system would mean loss of representation in several midwestern and northeastern states. The south and far west probably would get more votes in the house.

It was suggested that revision of apportionment already had been suggested to the house census committee, but members indicated that no action would be taken until the census had been completed.

Smoke Nuisance Hit By Citizens On Park Avenue

Sixth Ward residents in the vicinity of Park avenue east and Hedges street are complaining about the smoke nuisance in the neighborhood.

And they have decided to do something about it. Several petitions were obtained at City Hall yesterday and are being circulated among the residents on Park avenue, Glenn and Willis avenues and Hedges street.

The petitions which they expect to submit to council at its regular September meeting calls attention to smoke and soot in the neighborhood and asks council to take the necessary legislative action to alleviate the condition.

PROTECTOR

OMAHA, Neb. —(INS)— An ancient maple tree was spared last year after O. A. Lerdahl contemplated cutting it down. It was too good a protector against the sun, he decided. Recently it proved a good protector against something more threatening. It stopped a runaway milk truck rolling down on five children, among them Lerdahl's son and grandson. "If it hadn't been for that tree, they would have all been killed," Mrs. Lerdahl said.

TELLS HISTORY OF EMPLOYMENT SERVICE BEFORE GALION ROTARY

GALION—Harold Leech, manager of the local state employment bureau, addressed the Galion Rotary club at its meeting Monday night at the Maxwell House.

He told of the past activities of employment service, and stated that this is the 50th anniversary year of the service. It was started in 1890 as a state agency with only five offices. At that time it was a labor organization service In 1917 it was organized under the national defense commission and 13 offices were added at that time. After the war, federal support was withdrawn, and then it reverted to state up-keep, Leech said.

In 1936, the federal employment service was started. The speaker said that there are now 47 full time offices in Ohio, and a number of extension offices that are open several days in a week.

Leech stated that defense training under the present employment bureau is working through the state board of education and federal employment service. After training is completed by the men, they are reclassified in the local offices and given different ratings, and may rate several classifications instead of one of just a few. They are then prepared for a wider scope of work and better jobs.

Visitors at the meeting were E. R. Pickering of Galion; James C. Snyder and Paul E. Jones of the Cardington club; and William Webster of Aurora, New York.

There will be no meeting next Monday night, but Ladies' Night will be observed on September 9th

OFFER LOW BID ON SEWER JOB

Darling and Son Agree To Build Lincoln Heights Line For $865.30.

R. O. Darling and Son, Mansfield contractors, apparently were low bidders today on the construction of a storm sewer on Indiana avenue in Lincoln Heights, but county commissioners withheld the awarding of the contract until next week

Commissioners yesterday opened six bids on the project, two of them identical.

The R. O. Darling firm bid $865.30 on the materials and labor, while Roger Au, Mansfield, submitted a bid for $953, and R. H. Metz, Shelby, was high at $971.99.

Voegele Brothers and M L. Branyon and Brothers, Mansfield, offered to furnish materials only for $264.15. The county, however, asked for bids on both materials and labor.

The storm sewer, which will be constructed along the east side of Indiana avenue, will be 1,092 feet long. Total cost of the work was estimated at $1,035.

HOSPITAL CARE FOR INDIGENTS COSTS $5,098

Charges to City Averaging $725 Monthly; Crafton Sees Fund Exhausted.

Hospitalization of indigent patients during the first seven months of 1940 has cost the city a total of $5,098, it was reported today by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton.

At the present rate of the expenditures — an average of $725 monthly—the total bill at the end of the year will amount to $8,700.

Cost of maintaining the health of persons who are unable to provide their own hospital expense is in addition to other convalescent care, invalid car service and funerals that the city pays annually in connection with the administration of poor relief.

City council set up only $15,000 in the annual appropriations bill at the first of the year to cover the entire expense and Crafton today expressed doubt if the funds would be enough to cover the cost.

Hospitalization and medical service for indigents has annually exceeded appropriations Crafton said.

Crafton's report from Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner showed that 151 patients have been hospitalized during the past seven months, the average cost per patient totaling $34.

The city has a contract with the General hospital for medical and surgical care calling for a daily rate of $4.75 per patient.

Dr. Rehder's report revealed that 1,287 patients days have been recorded so far this year, and that a total of 67 X-rays have been taken for indigents.

Of the total amount spent, $4,517 has gone to the General hospital and $581 to the Eleanor Thomas hospital, now the Richland county Tuberculosis hospital.

Chiseling The Unemployed Under Bricker

The Unemployment Insurance Law was passed under the Davey administration, in December 1936, to conform to the Federal law. It was intended to provide $15 a week for those who were temporarily unemployed, through no fault of their own. Bricker chiseled them down to $4, $5, and $6 a week, sometimes as low as $1.50 or $2 a week. He has been inhuman.

Martin L. Davey

Davey set up the vast machinery for the handling of unemployment insurance on a businesslike basis, and on the advice of insurance experts. So good a job was done in organizing this department under Davey, that Ohio was the only State in the Union that was ready to pay benefits on time.

Under Davey's administration, the employees were selected by Civil Service. The United States Social Security Board provided $92,000.00 for the Civil Service examinations. Thousands of Ohio citizens paid their money in good faith to take these examinations. The Social Security Board supervised this. The selections were made according to law.

The first thing Bricker did was to pass a "ripper" law to get immediate political control of the unemployment insurance program. He promptly fired hundreds of Civil Service employees, who had a right to the positions under the law, and who had the experience to do the work properly. He filled these places with Bricker politicians, irrespective of merit.

The present Governor has shown a brazen contempt for Civil Service laws and all other laws. His attitude seems to be that he personally owns the State government. If laws are in his way, he still rules with a ruthless hand.

But the worst thing about his high-handed mismanagement of unemployment insurance is his cruel and brutal attitude toward the helpless unemployed. This is a humanitarian law. It was intended to help people, and not grind them down, because they were unlucky enough to be out of work temporarily.

Davey left more than $125,000,000.00 in the Ohio Unemployment Insurance Fund in the United States Treasury. Bricker is piling up still more Ohio money by cheating the unemployed. Why leave all this Ohio money in Washington? It helps no Ohio people there. Let's be a little more generous with the unemployed. Make the law humane and fair. It will help Ohio merchants, landlords, doctors, dentists, etc.

But above all it should be made to help, and not starve, the unemployed. Davey will make this law humane, and generous, and just.

Ohio Legion to Elect Successor to Gardner Today

CONNEAUT VET STILL FAVORED AS NEW CHIEF

Toledo Convention Votes For Strong Defense Program With School Training.

Ohio Legionnaires turned today to the selection of new state officers after advocating a strong defense program which would inaugurate military training in high schools.

Ralph H. Stone of Conneaut still was unopposed to succeed department Commander R. B. Gardner of Mansfield as the Legion's 22nd annual state convention entered its final sessions in Toledo.

Contests appeared for other offices, with Floyd Hartpence of Westerville and Russell Cunningham of Lancaster seeking the vice commander's post; Rev. Allan H. Brown of Ashtabula and Rev. Ignatius Lee of Hillsboro, chaplain; and Glen Huber of Hicksville and J. E. Giffin of Bellaire, treasurer.

Past Commander Eli A. Jensen of Springfield was the lone candidate for national committeemen to succeed James R. Favret of Cincinnati.

The Legion expressed its opinion yesterday concerning national defense with approval of a proposed program which would establish junior reserve officer training corps in high schools throughout the state.

Delegates recommended the department commander appoint a committee to study the feasibility of establishing such units.

Colleges and universities supported by public funds should be required to give military training, the convention declared. Other defense resolutions recommended approval of war department proposals for procuring military personnel; and enactment of legislation to ban un-American groups and suppress subversive activities.

"The United States should forthwith take whatever steps may be necessary to insure adequate defense of America, regardless of the outcome of the present war," the convention declared.

Heated debate developed over proposals for increased aid to Great Britain, repeal of the United States neutrality amendment and a stand on conscription. Resolutions on these subjects ultimately were tabled.

Delegates approved a resolution to protest against educational systems employing instructors who teach un-American or un-patriotic doctrines.

The traditional parade followed yesterday's business session. A three-mile-long procession moved through Toledo's downtown district. Legion officials said 19,000 took part and estimated 100,000 spectators looked on despite rain and cold weather.

Council's Sure Cleveland Will Win That Pennant

CLEVELAND—(INS)—As far as members of Cleveland city council are concerned, the Indians have won the American League championship.

Council ordered Frank E. Bubna, commissioner of federal relations, to proceed with full plans for construction of a pedestrian ramp from Lakeside avenue to Gate D. on the southeast corner of Cleveland stadium, in order to accommodate the rush of fans for a World Series.

The ramp, estimated to cost $8,000, would alleviate traffic jams by opening four pedestrian lanes. At present vehicles and fans walking to the stadium pour onto the same two bridges and create a difficult situation.

Up and Down THE STREET

Reddest face in Mansfield the other morning belonged to a retired police officer, C. B. Gray, who lives up Poplar street way. While walking up Poplar street, sans shirt, a neighbor called to him from an upstairs window. When the officer looked up he unwittingly pulled in his ample stomach, and before you could say "thirty days" his trousers had dropped quietly to the sidewalk. The officer's dash for home is still the talk of the neighborhood, where a movement is on foot to buy him a pair of suspenders.

MAPPING FIGHT ON PARALYSIS

Health Director Confers With Foundation Leader as Disease Hits Ohio.

COLUMBUS—State Health Director R. H. Markwith conferred with Dr. Don W. Gudakust, medical director of the national foundation for infantile paralysis, today as eight new cases of infantile paralysis were reported in Ohio.

Gudakunst said he was visiting areas where "large numbers" of infantile paralysis cases had appeared lately. He will determine what aid the foundation can give to alleviate the outbreaks.

He and Markwith discussed the Ohio situation where 120 cases including nine deaths have developed since June 10.

The foundation, located in New York, has special splints available for loan to localities. These splints are used to arrest muscular contraction and permanent deformation in paralysis victims.

The foundation will assist in obtaining "iron lungs" for patients. Ohio has 15 of the artificial "lungs."

Worst affected by the current infantile paralysis outbreak are West Virginia, Indiana, Kansas and Ohio, Dr. Gudakunst said. New cases today included four in Lawrence county and one each in Wayne, Hamilton, Medina and Logan counties.

MANSFIELD WOMEN WINNERS IN STATE FAIR NEEDLEWORK SHOW

Two Mansfield women were among the winners today in the needlework exhibits at the Ohio State fair.

Mrs. Benton F. Beal, 165 Marion avenue, shared honors with Mrs. Nellie Hart of Cincinnati, in winning the major share of prizes in needlework submitted by women over 70.

Mrs. J. W. Leistensnider of 87 Greenwood avenue, won a sweepstake prize on a quilt she exhibited and also won a first prize for the most artistic quilt exhibited.

Mrs. Beal exhibited rugs, quilts, crochet work and other needlework articles.

Governor John W. Bricker is scheduled to make his first official visit to the fair today in a parade which will start at the courthouse and be reviewed at the race track grandstand.

At the junior fair, the governor will receive a "state farmer" key from the president of the Future Farmers. He also will speak at state highway patrol headquarters, appearing later at the night horse show to award trophies to the owners of champion colts in the draft horse classes.

Yesterday was ladies' day and approximately 50,000 were admitted free. The throng disregarded rain and 80-degree temperature.

The fair's amusement area was minus three exhibits today on orders from State Agriculture Director John T. Brown.

The director ordered the closing of two penny arcades and the Congress of Oddities, declaring they were "below the standards at the state fair."

The freak show closed by Brown had about 20 exhibits, including "Christine, the crocodile girl," "Zolla, the human jigsaw puzzle," "old funny face, the rubber man," and "the monkey people from Montevideo."

The same show appeared in Mansfield at the county fair. At that time the show did not include the exhibits, which Brown criticized.

President Says Other Law Will Cover Deportation Cases.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—President Roosevelt vetoed yesterday two bills sponsored by Rep. Robert T. Secrest, (D., O.) which proposed to suspend pending deportation proceedings against two aliens and admit them to permanent residence.

The president advised congress that the newly enacted alien registration act permits the attorney general to suspend deportation of any alien under certain conditions and that the cases involved in the legislation could better be handled administratively.

The bills involved Richard Paul Rehn and Johann Rudolf Huenberg, both German citizens and both married to naturalized aliens.

Excess Profits Tax Awaiting Final Draft

BILL WOULD INCREASE RATE AND EXEMPTION

Committee Seeks Law That Will Protect Small Business; Early Passage Seen.

WASHINGTON—(U.P.)—An excess profits tax bill with provisions designed to protect small and weak corporations awaited only formal drafting today before being introduced in the house.

The house ways and means committee agreed unanimously on the measure late yesterday after increasing the rate schedule and raising the minimum exemptions.

Instead of a single schedule carrying rates from 25 to 40 per cent the committee decided on two, with rates from 20 to 50 per cent. A minimum credit against the excess profits tax of six per cent return on the first $500,000 of invested capital was increased to seven per cent.

There were other less important, last minute changes, but these two provide a "substantial" increase in the anticipated revenue. Experts have not submitted official figures, but it was estimated unofficially that the bill might yield $300,000,000 on 1940 corporation income instead of $165,000,000.

Chairman Robert L. Doughton of the ways and means committee, who said he "couldn't be happier over anything" than that his group had agreed unanimously on so complicated and important a subject as excess profits taxes, expects to be able to introduce the bill today.

If the draft is completed in time, the house can begin consideration—and possibly pass the bill — on Thursday, Doughton thought.

In its present form the bill covers three fields:

1. Suspension of the profits limitations imposed on airplane and warship manufacturers under government contracts.

2. An amortization or write-off program to permit manufacturers of national defense materials to recapture the cost of plant expansion in five years.

3. The excess profits tax.

The profits tax will apply only to corporations, and not to individuals or partnerships. As a basis for determining what are "excess" profits, the bill selects the 1936 to 1939 inclusive, to be known as "base period years."

The Voice of BROADWAY

—By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

Miss Midnight's Diary:

Dear Diary: The thing that fascinates me most these evenings is Tom Mix's wardrobe. I can pass Lucius Beebe any night in the bar at 21 without doing a double take, no matter how plainly he is attired, and I can now gaze at Tommy Manville and not flinch, even when he is wearing his triple-breasted pearl gray dinner jacket with the Alice blue satin lapels. But Brother Mix really has me; I just sit in the Stork Club or some other bistro staring at him in abject fascination, and goodness knows how much excitement I miss when he is around.

Part of the fascination lies in the contradiction between Tom's face and his clothes. You somehow do not expect a fellow with a stern granite pan, whose best friend is a horse, to be dolled up in fancy suits which must keep him home nights whipping up designs.

It is hard to describe the suits, but I think my favorite is the pale beige one with the yoke piped in brown, and the pleats.

* * *

Tom was right in the swing at LaConga Saturday night. He charged right into the conga line, mixing with such experts as Zorina, Ben Blue, and Peggy Fears. Ringsiding, but not conga-ing, were Sally Eilers and Joan Bennett with Walter Wanger, and a few tables away was Gloria Swanson, who never seems to get a day older.

Peggy Hopkins Joyce, back from a flying trip to her home in Virginia, reported that her mother, who has been very ill, is much better. Her absence from town apparently didn't affect Peggy's popularity with the stag line; she was escorted by not one, but two, handsome beaux!

* * *

When a place is jammed to the doors on a Monday night in the summer time, then I suppose it is what you would call a smash hit, and I begin to wonder what will happen to Fefe's Cafe Pierre when autumn comes and people get back to town and the season is really on.

Anyway, the situation was pretty tense when I dropped in: the floor was so packed Joan Edwards had to sing facing the orchestra (reminded me of the time a night club was so crowded a girl named Helen Morgan had to sing sitting on the piano) and Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., Nelson and Laurence Rockefeller, and Tommy Manville were standing in the entrance waiting for seats. Sandwiched into small spaces around the room were Ray Bolger, Marie Spaulding, Mrs. Wanamaker Munn, Franchot Tone, Arlene Judge and Nancy Carroll.

I think Miss Judge and Miss Carroll have taken root in the place, and are now just part of the standard decorations, like the murals

* * *

Into Toots Shor's early American boite that same evening strolled a disconsolate young man in those bright and unmatched clothes peculiar to Hollywood. He was Jimmy Van Heusen, the songwriter whose tunes are currently monopolizing the Hit Parade, and all he wanted was a steak and somebody to talk to.

It seems that Jimmy got a little bored and fed up with Hollywood and pictures, and terribly homesick for his pals in New York. So he hopped a plane to Manhattan, just to get a look at the old faces.

* * *

There was a lot of "don't-look-now-ing" going on at the St. Regis Viennese Roof the other dinner-time because Richard Greene, Joan Bennett and Walter Wanger, the James Farleys, Ambassador to Poland Anthony Biddle, George Abbott and Robert Sherwood were among those who sat out the waltzes.

There were no autograph complications over Miss Bennett's dark-haired resemblance to Miss LaMarr, but there was an observation on the subject at the next table.

* * *

The tailored-suit and shirt fad, which started with Ethel Merman's appearance in semi-masculine garb, has spread to another glamor gal. Zorina turned up at the Savoy-Plaza lounge in a gray, pin-striped suit and mannish shirt, and looked very bewitching. I suppose in another two weeks there won't be a frill left in town, if you know what I mean.

Draped around the room chortling over John Buckmaster were the John Jacob Astors, Horace Dodge and his daughter Delphine, Dan Topping and Sonja Henie, Ethel Merman and Mrs. Aileen Brindsley-Plunkett, whose name I consider one of the most fascinating in circulation.

Miss Merman chatted after the show with Buckmaster, and wound up her conversation by saying, "Your French is wonderful. I wish you'd tell me what you were saying."

"Your guess is as good as mine," replied John. "That was double talk!"

FINED $10 ON ASSAULT COUNT

Highway Maintenance Superintendent Appears In Court.

James McMillen, state highway maintenance superintendent for Richland county, was fined $10 and costs in municipal court on a charge of assault and battery Saturday, after the case had been continued for four weeks.

McMillen was arrested early in August and the case was first continued to Aug. 12 and then was postponed, while he was at liberty under $500 bond. He was arrested on an affidavit signed by Thomas DeVine, Ninth avenue, who said that McMillen had knocked him down a few days after he was released from General hospital. The altercation followed a political argument.

McMillen had pleaded innocent.

Open Church Playoff Today

Lutherans, Congregationals Battle for Softball Title.

The First Congregational church softball teams will tangle at 6:15 p. m. today at the Blue Goose field in the first of a three game series to decide the Y. M. C. A. Church League championship.

The Congregationals advanced to the championship series yesterday by defeating the St. John's Evangelical combine 6 to 2, to win the second round championship in a playoff contest at Maple Lake.

St. John's, First Congregational and the First Lutherans were tied for first place at the end of the second round. St. John's eliminated the First Lutherans, first round winners, in a game last week with last night's game deciding the second round championship.

The Congregationals scored first in the third inning when they put across four runs, enough to win the game, and scored two more in the fifth frame. St. John's scored once each in the second and fifth. Larson, on the mound for the Congregationals, allowed but four hits, while Augustine, the Johnnies pitcher, gave up seven safeties.

Golfers Bust Par In Meet

Dick Metz Sets Pace With 69 in PGA Event.

HERSHEY, Pa.—(AP)—The professionals demonstrated again today that there's something whacky about par being the mythically perfect score in golf.

* * *

The field of 120 of the game's best shotmakers moved into the second 18-hole qualifying round for the PGA championship, spraying a rain soaked, long and exacting course with birdies and eagles.

* * *

Dick Metz fashioned a 69. At 70 were Ralph Guldahl, Jug McSpaden, and Johnny Gibson, 29-year-old assistant pro from Chicago. At 71 were Jimmy Demaret, Jimmy Hines, Ky Laffoon and Paul Runyan.

Players surmised that 153 and more for the 36 holes of qualifying might put them out of the tournament by tonight. After that 64 players remain for the matches, including Defending Champion Henry Picard. Two men come down to the finals Sunday.

Big League Leaders Look Ripe for Fall

By JUDSON BAILEY
(AP Sports Writer)

IT'S a tough task to shake baseball's league leaders out of the treetops in August, even when they look ripe for fall.

* * *

The Cleveland Indians, who once this season gained the American League lead by losing four straight, seemed in danger of dropping off their precarious perch in the throes of another four-game losing streak last week-end.

* * *

But they stopped it yesterday by edging out the Washington Senators 4-3 while both the second-place Detroit Tigers and third-place New York Yankees were kept idle by rain. As the result the Indians increased their advantage over the Tigers to three games and over the Yanks to six.

Meanwhile the Cincinnati Reds split a double bill with the Philadelphia Phillies without harming their 7½ game advantage in the National League because the Brooklyn Dodgers also were rained out.

Carl Hubbell, who at 37 is working harder than a lot of baseball youngsters, made his third appearance in four days and saved the New York Giants a 10-5 verdict over the Chicago Cubs. New Yorkers manufactured 16 hits and clustered enough of them in the early innings to give Harry Gumbert an 8-1 lead. But he faltered and 'Hub" pulled the Terrymen out, pitching five shutout innings and getting credit for his 11th victory.

* * *

Another fine relief showing was that of Boston's Jim Bagby in helping the Red Sox to a 7-6 decision over the St. Louis Browns. He allowed only two hits in the last 6⅓ innings. Manager Joe Cronin produced three runs with a double and a single.

The Boston Bees threw more water on the St. Louis Cardinals' conflagration by winning a night game 3-1 with Rookie Nic Strincevich hurling five-hit ball.

Moose Faces All-Star Club

The Moose Lodge softball team, champions of the Y. M. C. A. Commercial league, will be out after its first victory over the Commercial League All-Stars when the two teams meet for the third time in the series, Thursday night at the Fairground park.

* * *

Francis Brown is expected to be on the hill for the Moose aggregation while Manager Pete Metz of the All-Stars will probably nominate Warren Gross to do the twirling for the stars.

The All-Stars defeated the Moose nine by scores of 6 to 4 and 5 to 4 in their first two meetings. The Moose All-Star contest is scheduled to begin at 7 p. m., and will be part of a double-header, with the Mansfield Braves meeting Fostoria in the second half of the twin bill.

Heroes and Goats

(By International News Service)

HEROES—Bucky Walters, Reds, who pitched five-hit ball, hit a home run and drove in the winning run with a single in the first game of a double-header with the Phillies; Manager Joe Cronin, Red Sox, whose timely eighth inning single drove in two tallies to enable Boston to nose out the Browns.

GOATS—Vern Olsen, Cubs, who was shelled from the mound by a five run New York rally in the fourth inning; Whitey Moore, Reds, who also was knocked out of the box in the fourth in the second game of a doubleheader with the Phils.

GREYHOUND MAY RACE AGAIN NEXT SEASON

SYRACUSE, N. Y. — (AP) — Sep Palin, trainer-driver of Greyhound, the great trotter who won what was heralded as his "last race" yesterday, indicates there's considerable elasticity in that word "last."

After the eight-year-old gelding made his 1940 Grand Circuit cleanup complete with a two-out-of-three-heat victory in the $1,733 Trotting club trot at the Syracuse fairground, Palin ventured:

"Yep. It's his last race—this season."

Braves' Rally Fall Short; Lima Triumphs

Mansfield Scores 3 Times In Ninth, Loses 4-3.

A DESPERATE Mansfield Brave scoring splurge in the ninth inning fell a run short of tieing the score last night and the club dropped a 4 to 3 decision to the pace-setting Pandas at Lima in an Ohio State league contest.

The Braves ran into Lefty Biscan last night and it wasn't until the ninth that the Mansfield team threatened. Up to that time the Braves had secured one hit—a single by Herb Woodten.

Manager Dewey Stover and his combine square off against the Pandas at the Fairground at 8:30 p. m. today and George Laurila is expected to handle the mound duties.

Bob Arnold, seeking his 7th win of the season worked on the hill for the Braves last night and he ran into trouble in two frames—the third and fourth.

In the third, Lima scored three times and then added what proved to be the winning run in the next chapter. The Pandas collected eight hits off Bob.

Biscan was complete master of the Braves until two were retired in the ninth. Then two walks, coupled with a pair of hits, produced the three tallies. It was Biscan's 24th triumph.

Woodten paced the Mansfield club at the plate with a double and single, while Gene Woodling and Howard Beals divided the other two hits between them.

In the other league games last night, Findlay stopped Tiffin, 2 to 0, and Fostoria turned back last-place Fremont, 11 to 1.

Vitt Calls on 'Big Five' to Be Ready for Relief Duty; Tribe Wins, 4-3.

WASHINGTON—(AP)—From now until the end of the season, the strong men of the Indians' pitching staff will take their work as it comes along—and in addition to starting assignments that will be whenever one of them gets in trouble.

Deciding its hurlers can keep the Tribe at the top of the league, Manager Oscar Vitt called on the formidable five—Bobby Feller, Al Milnar, Al Smith, Mel Harder and Johnny Allen—to be ready for relief roles.

* * *

The Indians hold a three-game edge over the second-place Detroit Tigers, having snapped their four-game losing streak yesterday with a 4 to 3 triumph over Washington.

* * *

The Indians had to use Feller to turn the trick. He entered with one man out in the seventh and a runner on second base, relieving Mel Harder, and didn't allow a hit the remainder of the way.

Hal Trosky swung the bat that gave the Indians the runs. With a mate on base in the first inning, Trosky drove one of Emil "Dutch" Leonard's offerings over the wall for his 23rd homer.

* * *

Two innings later, he singled another run home. The winning tally came in the sixth on Jeff Heath's single and Ken Keltner's triple.

* * *

Smith was the Tribe nominee for the rubber game of the Washington series. The Nats called on Southpaw Kendall Chase. The Indians hope that they had weathered another eastern storm which failed to sink their pennant ship.

Three Extra Heats Today

State Fair Racing Program Is Increased.

COLUMBUS — (INS) — Harness racing fans attending the 90th annual Ohio state fair were to have three extra heats to watch today because of rain which forced postponement.

* * *

Only two heats of each race was run yesterday as rain came down on an already muddy track. Weetamoe, owned by John E. Kelly, of Bangor, Me., and driven by Harry Short, won both heats of the 2:15 trot, lone stake on the inaugural program.

* * *

General Sherwood, owned by P. D. Lockwood, of Midland, Pa., and driven by Bob Plaxico, took the first heat in the 2:24 pace but lost the second to Junee Lee. The latter is owned by the Lovett Implement company, of Lynchburg, O., and was driven by Fred Crawford.

* * *

Lady Win and Petromite divided honors in the 2:13 pace. Lady Win owned by Provost and Shields of Pittsburgh and driven by Darrell Maher, copped the first, with Petromite finishing second. Things were reversed in the second heat with Petromite, owned by Dan Parish, of Sharon, Pa., and driven by Doc McMillen, running ahead of Lady Win.

A total of 14 heats were to be raced today with action scheduled to get under way at 1 p. m.

Baker Thinks Tigers Can Win

Detroit Pilot Says Club May Beat Cleveland.

PHILADELPHIA—(AP)—Given a few "better breaks" Manager Del Baker thinks his Detroit Tigers have a "good chance" of edging out Cleveland for the American league pennant.

* * *

"I know our chances are good," he declared, after rain forced postponement of yesterday's game with the Athletics. "But so are those of the other contenders — especially New York."

* * *

Baker admits the Indians have an edge in pitching and a little tighter defense, "but beyond that everything favors the Tigers."

* * *

Beset all year with injuries, Detroit is still without the services of Charley Gehringer, veteran second baseman who pulled a muscle in his leg.

* * *

"We've just about had all the bad breaks one team could get," smiled Del, "and it's not likely it can get much worse."

COON TRIALS SET

Club Bowling League Sets Opening Date.

With the same 12 teams that were in the league last year set to battle it out for title honors again this season in the Club bowling league, the circuit will open Monday Sept. 9, Pete Linster, loop president, stated today following a meeting of the league at the Meder Recreation alleys last night. During the session, Ralph LeMunyon was elected secretary-treasurer of the group. Lumbermen's Insurance team is the defending champion.

Association Managers May Be In Majors

Beyer, Sheehan Expected To Join Big Leagues.

Mike Kelley, venerable owner of the Minneapolis American association club, has said repeatedly that his own manager, Tom Sheehan, and Kansas City's pilot, Bill Beyer, are as good as any in the business. Apparently several other baseball-wise owners hold the same view.

* * *

Both Sheehan and Meyer were mentioned a year ago as big league managerial talent, and the same talk again is going the rounds. Pittsburgh was interested in Sheehan a year ago.

* * *

Current reports indicate the Boston Red Sox would like to have Sheehan for 1941 and Meyer has been mentioned repeatedly as a possiblity to take over the Chicago Cubs

Whether either would be interested in moving up is a question.

* * *

Attention has been concentrated on Sheehan and Meyer because they produced aggressive, smart teams in the association race. The Blues now are in first place by six games and Minneapolis, no worse than second most of the year, is a half game behind Columbus, which recently took over the runner-up spot.

* * *

Four doubleheaders were on tap today or tonight after rain washed out Monday's program of one doubleheader and three single games.

It Looks as If Dodgers Can't Catch Reds

CINCINNATI — (AP) — Thirty-six games to go and a 7½ game deficit to make up—it's beginning to look more and more as if the Dodgers couldn't do it, at least not without a lot of co-operation which the Reds would give only under extreme duress.

Suppose Cincinnati's favorite ball club won only 18 of its remaining 35 games. The Brooklyns would have to win 26 of their 36. It can be done but it's a stiff pace.

The respective chances of the St. Louis Cardinals and the New York Giants, now tied for third, 12½ games behind, can be worked out on your own slide rule.

Given a stand-off in yesterday's twin bill with the Phils, the Reds try to pick up their latest spurt again today, with either Paul Derringer or Gene Thompson doing the pitching. Paul is still nursing a bruised elbow suffered last week when a liner hit him and may rest some more. Kirby Higbe is the Philadelphia hurler.

* * *

Bucky Walters' annual home run plus his single accounted for two of the Reds' three runs in yesterday's opener and the Reds took it, 3 to 2. However, the canny Sylvester Johnson gave the Reds just three hittable balls in the nightcap.

One became Catcher Bill Baker's triple, which, coupled with a fly, made the Reds' only run in the second. The final score was 6 to 1 for the Phils.

Rip's Leading the League But He Can't Tell Why

RIP RADCIFF: 'He Just Meets The Ball Squarely'

ST. LOUIS —(AP)— Raymond (Rip) Radcliff, St. Louis Browns' outfielder who leads the American league in batting, says, "They're just falling for hits this year, I guess."

The 32-year-old player who come to St. Louis from the Chicago White Sox in a winter trade has no secret formula for his .352. brought only this comment:

* * *

"I'm not doing anything different than I ever did," he says. "I just stay loose up there and try to keep swinging. I got off to a good start this spring, have been in there regularly and that's what I need. I've kept in good shape and with a hustling ball club like ours you're bound to keep doing your best. I'm using the same stance, the same weight bat and the same grip on the bat."

* * *

Radcliff weighs around 170 and is not a slugger. His specialty is line drives over the infield good for singles and doubles. He says he isn't aiming for the league batting crown, especially.

"All I want to do is get as many hits as I can and get 'em when they do the most good. I'm out there to try to help win ball games and if I happen to win the batting championship that'll be swell. Right now, though, I'm not even thinking about that."

Manager Fred Haney says of Radcliff:

"Watch him. Ever see him swink hard enough to throw himself off balance? Never. Just meets the ball. If you meet the ball squarely you'll get your share of base hits."

And catcher George Tebbetts of the Detroit Tigers comments:

"He'll take a strike to get the one he wants. And whenever a batter has that poise he usually is a dangerous man at the plate."

Radcliff is playing his sixth year in the majors and has been with but two clubs, the White Sox and Browns. He batted .264 last year. He bats left handed but throws the same way. Rip roams the outfield or fills in at first base, the position he played when he first broke into organized baseball in 1928 with Paris of the Lone Star league.

He was with Muskogee of the Western Association and later with Dallas of the Texas league of the Southwest league, and in 1931 was with Shreveport, where he made his debut as an outfielder. Radcliff played outfield for Dallas in 1932 and for St. Paul of the American Association the following season.

In 1934 he was with the White Sox for a time but played most of the year with Louisville of the American Association where his batting mark of .335 brought him another trial in the big time.

His first full season at Chicago in 1935 he batted only .286 but in the three following seasons he was well above .300.

Keep an Eye on Mr. Ketchuk, New Heavyweight Title Seeker

NEW YORK—(AP)—Charley Ketchuk has just completed "Practical Experience I," the first part of a three-year course on "How to Become Heavyweight Champion of the World"

* * *

He passed his final examination with a 10-round decision over Wally Sears and Professor Jersey Jones marked his protege's report card with an A for ability, A for patience and perseverance and AA plus for willingness to learn.

* * *

Professor Jones is one of Promoter Mike Jacobs' tub-thumpers. He stepped into the part-time professional robes when he took over the 20-year-old Ketchuk just a year ago. The publicity man-manager, believe it or not, has been pulling his typewriter punches on the kid.

Even now he is seeking no immediate place in the fistic sun for his charge. Says Professor Jersey:

"When Ketchuk turned pro in July of 1939, we worked out a definite schedule for him. The first year we tagged for 'practical experience,' the second for 'advanced opposition,' the third for the actual 'drive for the championship.' "

Despite Jersey's paradoxical aversion to publicity, the story is out that he really has something in Ketchuk. Since Charley first pulled on the gloves for money on July 14, 1939, he has fought 19 times. Eight opponents, after knockouts, decided that Mr. Ketchuk's heavyweight championship ambitions were okay by them. Nine fights Charley won by decision. He drew once but came back the next week to wallop that same opponent. Dan Merritt of Cleveland, with superior "practical experience," beat Ketchuk on a questionable decision (Jersey's description) last September.

Charley's list of first-year victims isn't exactly a Who's Who of heavyweight boxing but Jersey didn't want to overmatch his boy. In some fights Jersey asserts, he had Ketchuk hold his KO punch for a few rounds, just to give Charley a chance for that "practical experience."

Charley is the youngest of eight children of Russian parents. He's a native Pennsylvanian but has lived the last eight years at Endicott, N. Y. He attended high school there and was considered an excellent collegiate football prospect at center but turned aside helping hands from five colleges to become a fisticuffer. He won 40 of 44 fights as an amateur.

Better Opponents.

This year, under Jersey's program, Ketchuk will meet third and fourth raters, maybe some of the Second Ten in the heavyweight ranks.

Pat Comiskey is Ketchuk's first big goal. Comiskey, a powerful New Jersey heavy—and he's really heavy—is moving along on a program somewhat similar to Charley's. Even Jersey admits that his boy might take a trimming if the pair met now. But they won't meet too soon, trust Mr. Jones, and when they do Jersey sees a knockout for Ketchuk. His reasoning:

* * *

"Comiskey is bigger physically, with some four inches in height and reach and perhaps 15 pounds in weight. Ketchuk, though, is faster, smarter, and a thunderous infighter. Comiskey isn't so hot in close. There's where Charley will win—he has both a powerful long range attack and that punishing close-in artillery."

* * *

This winter in Madison Square Garden or next summer in a New York ball park the two will meet, says Jersey. The next ultimate target—or have you guessed?—will be Joe Louis, or whoever may be occupying the heavyweight throne at the time.

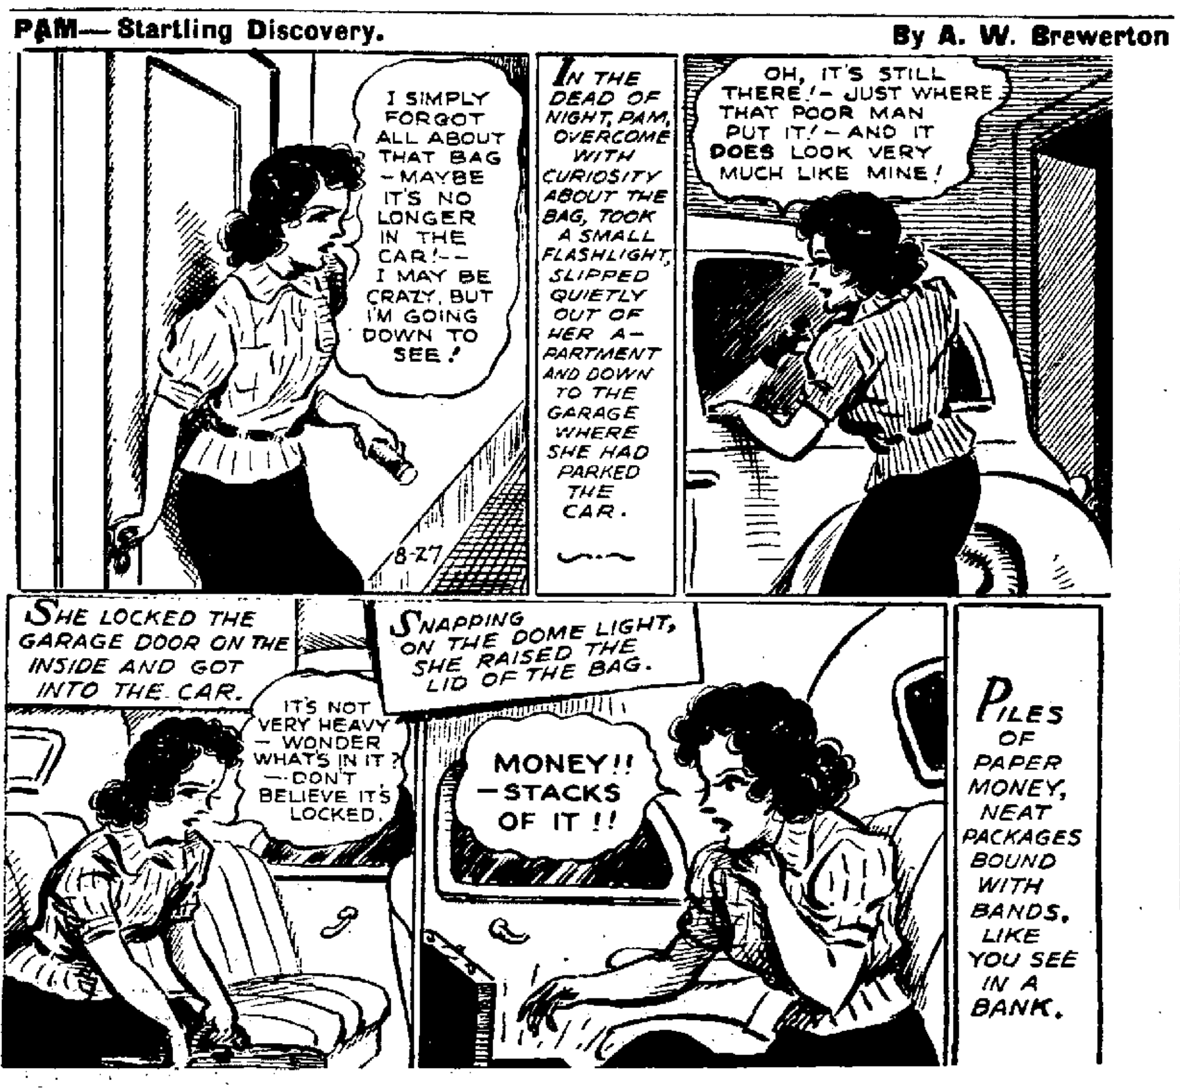
PAM— Startling Discovery.

By A. W. Brewerton



I SIMPLY FORGOT ALL ABOUT THAT BAG —MAYBE IT'S NO LONGER IN THE CAR!— I MAY BE CRAZY, BUT I'M GOING DOWN TO SEE!
8-27
IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT, PAM, OVERCOME WITH CURIOSITY ABOUT THE BAG, TOOK A SMALL FLASHLIGHT, SLIPPED QUIETLY OUT OF HER APARTMENT AND DOWN TO THE GARAGE WHERE SHE HAD PARKED THE CAR.
OH, IT'S STILL THERE!— JUST WHERE THAT POOR MAN PUT IT!— AND IT DOES LOOK VERY MUCH LIKE MINE!
SHE LOCKED THE GARAGE DOOR ON THE INSIDE AND GOT INTO THE CAR.
IT'S NOT VERY HEAVY — WONDER WHAT'S IN IT? —DON'T BELIEVE IT'S LOCKED.
SNAPPING ON THE DOME LIGHT, SHE RAISED THE LID OF THE BAG.
MONEY!! —STACKS OF IT!!

TRADERS SHOW INCLINATION TO PLAY SAFE

Leading Issues Are Unable to Develop Trends; Bonds Listless, Narrow.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK — Stock market traders generally exhibited further inclinations to remain in speculative safety zones today and leading issues were unable to develop a trend.

Bonds were as listless and narrow as stocks. Among commodities sugar futures pushed up on the Washington announcement quotas had been substantially cut.

Market timidity again was attributed partly to the lack of reassuring war news as exemplified by persistent Nazi bombing raids over England. No important change was seen in the business picture and the national tax problem still was viewed as an industrial stumbling block.

Financial quarters studied the statement of federal reserve member banks in 101 cities for the week ended Aug. 21 disclosing another drop in loans to commerce, industry and agriculture.

Interest was shown in the forecast of the lumber survey committee of the department of commerce that lumber consumption for the present year would exceed that of 1939 by 6 per cent.

Helpful were estimates Class 1 railroads in July had a combined net income of around $11,000,000 despite abnormally heavy outlays.

CONSCRIPTION BILL NEAR VOTE

Second Night Session in Week Called as Senate Leader Predicts Passage.

ment by Senator Lodge (R., Mass.) to limit the service of peacetime conscripts to the western hemisphere. The chamber voted down, 39 to 32, a proposal by Senator Clark (D., Mo.) to narrow the service area to the continental United States and American possessions.

Previously, the senate adopted a compromise proposal by Lodge which fixed 900,000 as the maximum number of conscripts to be in training at any one peacetime period.

Lodge's proposal restricting service to the western hemisphere conformed to a similar provision in legislation authorizing the president to order the national guard and army reserves into active service.

Taking the guard legislation as a model, the senate proceeded to approve other amendments moulding the conscription bill along similar lines.

It adopted an amendment by Senator Gurney (R., S. D.) striking out a provision authorizing the National Labor Relations Board to institute court proceedings to force re-employment of a conscript who had completed the year's training specified in the bill.

It provided for civil court trials of draft "dodgers" instead of hearings before military tribunals and voted to prohibit any person connected with the military establishment from becoming a member of a local draft board.

Without audible objections, the chamber wrote into the measure an amendment by Barkley to authorize the appropriation of funds to carry out the terms of the bill, thus clearing the way for quick congressional action to provide the money needed.

With these and other amendments out of the way, Barkley pronounced the bill "nearly ready" for the final vote, except for action on the three substitutes.

These all proposed delays, in one form or another, of the actual induction into military service of the young men from 21 through 30 years old who would be required to register under terms of the Burke-Wadsworth measure.

Senator Maloney (D., Conn.) proposed that one-year voluntary enlistments be tried until Jan. 1, if these failed to fill the army's quota, conscription would go into effect.

Senator Walsh (D., Mass.) advocated in his substitute that conscription be postponed until congress should declare a national emergency.

A third substitute sponsored by Senator Taft (R., Ohio) would set up a system of voluntary enlistments linked with the voluntary training of college students.

DRIVER JAILED

Faces Charge After Wreck at Greenwich Today.

Joe L. Gerber, 29, Willard, was in the Greenwich jail awaiting trial today, following an accident at the intersection of Route 13 and Route 224, just east of Greenwich, early today.

According to Mansfield highway patrolmen, Gerber was arrested on a charge of driving while intoxicated after he had pulled out of a filling station into the path of an oncoming truck, causing an accident.

The truck, which was operated by Forest Brewer, 40, Urichsville, tried to avoid colliding with Gerber's automobile and overturned on the highway, patrolmen said.

Highway patrolmen said that Brewer escaped injury but that the truck, which he had just purchased, was a total loss.

Gerber will be tried today in mayor's court at Greenwich.

GOING UP

Ohio Legislators Will Get Elevators in Capitol.

COLUMBUS — (AP) — For 83 years Ohio legislators have had to climb long, marble stairs to reach senate and house of representative chambers. Finally the state is getting around to providing them with elevator service in the Capitol building.

The department of public works announced today that work would start next week on an elevator from the first floor to the house chambers.

A $10,000 appropriation has been available for the extension estimated to cost about $5,000. Newspaper correspondents covering the Capitol will have to move their press room to make way for the elevator shaft.

TRADERS BUY SPARINGLY OF LEADERS TODAY

Many Top Issues Ignored In Market; British Loans Exhibit Strength.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Traders bought sparingly of steels and a few other favorites in today's stock market but ignored many leaders.

Attracting mild support were U. S Steel, Bethlehem, Kennecott, Phelps Dodge, N. Y. Central, Chesapeake & Ohio, Chrysler, Woolworth and General Electric

British empire dollar loans exhibited quiet strength in the bond department. Commodities were mixed.

Boardrooms scanned the survey of the magazine "Steel" which said that, with production close to the practical ceiling and some plants even above theoretical capacity, the hard metal industry is doing its best to fill requirements of consumers, mindful of a further jump in demand as armament needs reach the contract stage.

The labor department disclosed building permits issued throughout the United States in July exceeded those of June by 20 per cent.

SEEK PROBE OF BRITISH 'WAR' AGENT

Three Senators Make Joint Request for Study of Lobbying.

NOEL COWARD MENTIONED

English Knight Quoted as Saying He'll Get U. S. Into Present War.

WASHINGTON — (INS) — A double-barreled investigation into the activities of Sir George Paish, British economist who boasted to a United States senator that he was responsible for getting America into the last war, and that he was going to get this country into the present war, was demanded today.

Three senators united in requests that the department of state and justice probe the lobbying of the British knight, who admitted to Senator Wheeler (D.) Mont., that he was in the United States to put over a four-point program to aid Great Britain.

Wheeler, who was told by Paish that he would "be bound to vote" for American entrance into the war on the side of England, said that Sir George's four points are: 1. Get the conscription bill passed. 2. Get 50 American destroyers for Great Britain. 3 Repeal of the Johnson act. (This act prevents the United States from loaning money to nations defaulting World war debts.) 4 Create an alliance with Great Britain.

Wheeler, in a senate speech, said Sir George told him: "I (Sir George) am responsible for getting this country into the last war and I intend to get it into this one."

But Sir George complained to reporters today that the senator did not quote him correctly, explaining:

"What I said was that I am the man who helped get this country into the last war and I intend to present the facts to the American people and let them decide if they should get into this war."

The British embassy says that Sir George is in this country "entirely in a private capacity" and has no official connection.

Paish last week had a conference with President Roosevelt and at that time told reporters he was going to see Wendell Willkie, the Republican presidential nominee.

The senators who demanded

Ordered To Wear Pajamas Or Quit Walking In Sleep

CHICAGO — (INS) — John Kubovicz, 21, was under court compulsion today to buy pajamas or stop walking in his sleep. The alternative given him was to pay a $100 fine for indecent exposure.

Kubovicz was brought to court by his next door neighbor, Mrs. Beverly Mysza, who charged she awakened one night to find the youth on her fire escape, nude.

"I'm a sleepwalker," Kubovicz explained, "and I sleep in the nude because I'm allergic to pajamas."

Judge J. M. Braude was sympathetic, but ordered Kubovicz to lose his allergy or pay the fine.

PENSION LIST REACHES PEAK

Chief Reports All-Time High In Benefit Payments to Aged.

COLUMBUS—(INS)—The number of persons receiving aid for aged in Ohio stands at an all-time high level—127,484—Tom McCaw, state pension chief, declared today.

In August, 1,791 applicants were added to the rolls, pensions for this month totalling $2,915,426, an increase of $16,470 over July. Since a special sesion of the legislature made new funds available for pensions two months ago 7200 applications have been granted.

BANDITS ESCAPE

Pair Slugs Bank Messenger to Make $3,900 Payroll Haul.

BOSTON — (INS) — Two armed bandits in a stolen automobile outdistanced a police pursuit of several miles today and escaped with a $3,900 payroll after holding up Walter Rockwell, a bank messenger, in suburban Roxbury. The two men jumped aboard Rockwell's car, forced him to halt, then slugged him and sped away in their stolen machine with the payroll.

City Airport Attracts 2 Plane Firms

Inquiries Are Dispatched to Mansfield on Air Facilities.

At least two airplane companies are interested in Mansfield's municipal airport as a possible site for construction of manufacturing plants.

This was disclosed today by James R. Harrington, airport manager, who said he had received inquiries concerning the port from two different sources.

The inquiries were believed to have been in response from data sent to the nation's leading airplane and airplane parts manufacturers several weeks ago by the Chamber of Commerce.

The chamber's letters which were accompanied by a commercial survey of the city and surrounding territory cited the advantages of Mansfield as the location for the aviation industry.

Harrington said his inquiries came from a northern Ohio airplane manufacturer and a Dayton law firm.

Both, he said, were interested in the size of the field, its condition, particularly in the matter of runways. One inquiry asked for information concerning the condition of the field during the spring months when frost is leaving the ground.

Harrington said he answered both letters, explaining that with the condition of the present runways that landings and takeoffs were practically impossible for about five weeks during the spring.

However, it was learned today that a $40,000 National Youth administration proposal to improve the port had already been given approval of state NYA officials and was in Washington for final approval.

The project which would employ 100 Richland county youths for about a year calls for resodding the runways to correct the condition cited by Harrington. It also includes the development of a state roadside park on the port property and construction of an administration building.

Paving Leaves Stores Empty, Cash Registers Silent on Fourth Street

Business Men Relate They're Losing From 20 To 65 Per Cent As Street Construction Blocks Customers

BULLETIN

Shortly after noon, workmen started temporary work on the Walnut intersection of West Fourth street to permit traffic to use Walnut street across the paving project.

Their places of business practically empty, Fourth street business men told a story of staggering business losses today—due to the closing of the street for paving.

Estimates of losses in business volume ranged from 20 per cent to 65 per cent. And with the Mulberry street intersection closed, in addition to the one at Walnut street which has been closed for three weeks, merchants in that block expressed the fear that losses would mount even higher.

Parts of the street from Diamond to Mulberry have been closed to traffic since July 8, seven weeks ago. The North Walnut street crossing was closed on Aug. 7.

Don Wilson, superintendent on the job for the Mansfield Asphalt Paving company, which is doing the work with WPA labor, said laying of brick would start next week, after Labor day, but could give no estimate of when the three-block section of the street might be open. Pouring concrete started this morning on the north side of the street at the Diamond street end of the job.

After the concrete is laid, brick goes on top of it in the center sections. Curb strips are of concrete.

The entire street from Diamond west to the city limits is to be improved. Sections of it in the residential district have been torn up. It seemed likely today that the street near the John Simpson junior high school would be torn up for a time during the first weeks of school, which opens a week from tomorrow.

One West Fourth business man said that if he had known the street was to be closed so long, he would have urged fellow mer-

GIRL, 4, HURT

Struck by Car as She Runs Into Street Near Home.

A four-year-old girl was in General hospital today as a result of injuries sustained when she ran in front of an automobile, while she was playing near her home yesterday.

The girl, Janet Hemperly, Bahl avenue, R. D. 4, Mansfield, was treated at the hospital for a fractured leg and cuts and bruises, according to hospital officials.

The car, which was driven by Willard Lockhart, 21, Mansfield, was going east on Bahl avenue when the girl suddenly darted in front of his vehicle, the Mansfield highway patrol reported.

Start Trek To Postoffice As Alien Registration Opens

(Picture on Page 2)

Aliens from Mansfield and vicinity began their march to the postoffice, as registration for all aliens over 14 years of age got under way today.

In the first few hours this morning more than 30 aliens had applied for application blanks and the number was expected to pass 50 by noon, according to Postmaster H. E. Homberger.

Those who must register, Homberger said, are any foreign-born person or alien, 14 years of age or over, and any alien who has applied for naturalization papers but who is not yet a full citizen.

Homberger also stressed today that registration is "absolutely compulsory." Aliens failing to be registered by Dec. 26 are subject to $1,000 fine and six months imprisonment.

Distribution of application blanks is being handled by Homberger and William T. Houston, assistant postmaster.

It is expected, however, that when the actual registration and fingerprinting begins the postoffice may have to hire additional help.

"The alien must first apply for an application blank," Homberger said. "After he takes this blank home and fills it out, the applicant returns to the postoffice with the blank."

"It is from this that we get the necessary information to put on the actual registration form. The alien, after he swears to the truth of his statements, is then fingerprinted directly on the blank."

Registration and fingerprinting will take place in the Civil Service chambers on the second floor of the postoffice, where aliens return with their application blanks, Homberger explained.

OFFER 7 BIDS ON PARK METERS

Two Firms List Proposals on Automatic Devices and Five on Manually Operated.

The city board of control today was studying bids submitted by seven firms on the purchase of 500 parking meters to be installed in downtown Mansfield on a nine-month trial basis.

The bids were opened yesterday by the board which is composed of Mayor William J. Locke and Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton.

Crafton said it would probably be several weeks before a contract is let. He said the board wanted to minutely examine each type of meter and submit them to tests before deciding.

There were bids on two types of machines. Two companies entered proposals on automatically controlled meters and five firms turned in bids on manually operated devices.

The Dual Parking Meter company, Oklahoma City, Okla., one of the two firms which bid on automatic meters, quoted a price of $49.50 for a nickel machine, rentable at $3.50 per month for nine months with option of purchase at $18. On the company's deluxe model, it listed a unit price of $56.50, with final purchase price of $25.

The firm also submitted bids on

Infantile Paralysis Victim Given Oxygen During Labor.

INDIANAPOLIS — (AP) — An 18-year-old victim of infantile paralysis, Mrs. Ruby Cook, Darlington, Ind., farm wife, fought the disease in an "iron lung" today after leaving the respirator long enough to give birth to a three-pound boy.

The child was born prematurely last night in a caesarean operation. Doctors said it had a chance to live. Unable to breath, Mrs. Cook was given oxygen through an inhalator during the operation. She was in a critical condition today.

Mrs. Cook became ill a week ago. She has lived in the respirator at Robert W. Long hospital since last Thursday.

Majority Leader Expects That Measure Will Pass With 'Substantial Margins.'

STUDY SUBSTITUTE PLANS

Senators Act on Amendments, Limit Service to New World Areas.

BULLETIN

WASHINGTON —(INS)— The senate today temporarily set aside consideration of amendment to the military conscription bill to hear Sen. Johnson (D., Colo.) declare in a lengthy speech that a peacetime draft would strike a deathblow at democracy through adoption of Hitler methods.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The senate drove down the home stretch today toward a decision on conscription, concentrating immediate attention on three substitute proposals which must be acted upon before a final vote can be taken on the Burke-Wadsworth compulsory military training bill.

Scheduling the second night session of the week, Senator Barkley (D., Ky.) predicted passage of the measure—in a form calling for immediate conscription of manpower—before the day's end.

The majority leader told reporters he was confident that the senate would reject by "comfortable" margins all three proposals to postpone conscription and send the Burke-Wadsworth measure to the house in about the form it stood when debate began today.

Working until 10 p. m. (EST) last night, while packed galleries looked on, the chamber wrote into the measure a dozen amendments, some only technical and clarifying, but others that imposed restrictions on the use of men conscripted for service.

Chief of these was an amend-

German Attack Slows Up, RAF Bombers Busy

British Planes Raid Objectives in Germany, Italy; Few Nazi Ships Sighted Over Island After Long London Night Raid

BULLETIN

BUDAPEST — AP) — Diplomatic dispatches from Bucharest today reported a bloody border clash between Rumanian and Russian troops, resulting in hundreds dead on both sides.

BULLETIN

LONDON—(AP)—German bombers attacked a convoy of ships off the coast of Scotland for more than an hour today.

(By United Press)

LONDON — German daylight raiding planes roared over scattered coastal sectors of southern England again today after the Royal Air Force had dumped tons of high explosives on military objectives in Germany and northern Italy.

German planes were reported to have raided both the southeast and southwest areas during the afternoon but up to 4 p. m. (10 a. m. EST) it appeared that daylight action had been the lightest for several days. Only a single German reconnaissance plane had been sighted off the Dover channel coast.

Six tons of bombs were dropped on important Italian war factories in the Turin and Milan districts and on important military objectives in Germany, according to official London statements after a night of new air raid alarms in both London and Berlin.

The RAF pilots report many big explosions and a number of fires following their attacks on the Italian Fiat automobile plant, which makes airplane motors, and a big magneto plant near Milan.

Aerial warfare during the night was carried on relentlessly by both British and German air fleets.

(The Italian war communique admitted British bombings of Turin, Milan and Pavia, but the German high command's communique, while admitting penetration of Germany by British planes, said that damage was slight.)

New but lighter German aerial onslaughts today followed on raids over 500 miles of coastline and another prolonged air raid alarm in the London area. The night raids caused heavy material damage and casualties in the Midlands.

Damage was slight in London.

Raiding planes came singly or in pairs through a large part of the night and seemed bent largely on keeping Londoners awake. That they did this was evident by the tired faces of workers reporting for early morning shifts in the London area.

High explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped on many parts of England, and it was asserted that German planes continued to machine gun civilians.

The real fury of the night's at-

TOUGHER: Italian Press Threatens War With Egypt

(By United Press)

ROME—Italy's supervised press threatened today that an Italian declaration of war against Egypt is imminent because of Egyptian aid to Great Britain.

Egypt is a threat to Italy, warned Virginio Gayda, who frequently voices the opinion of Premier Benito Mussolini—a threat which will be "eliminated."

The sword is the only answer to Egypt, chorused the newspaper of Italy's foreign minister, Count Galeazzo Ciano.

The threat of a declaration of war—presumably preliminary to offensive action against Egypt—coincided with a report by the Italian high command of new British bombing attacks on northern Italian cities.

The high command reported a hangar of the Fiat airplane works at Turin was hit and that other bombs fell on the San Luigi sanitarium at Turin. One British bomber was reported shot down at Turin and one person was killed and another injured near Pavia.

Gayda, writing in the Giornale D'Italia, took note of the resignation of Premier Hassan Sabri Pasha of Egypt who has been instructed by King Farouk to form a new cabinet.

Hassan, Gayda charged, is anti-Italian and supports a policy which is dangerous to Italy. Therefore, Gayda said, Italy must fight the threat of Egypt.

Rumanian Plane Damages Bomber

BUDAPEST—(U.P.)—A Rumanian pursuit plane attacked and damaged a Hungarian bomber on the eastern border near Debrecen, directly east of Bucahrest today. The bomber was able to land safely. One member of its crew was wounded.

Debrecen is on the eastern border of Hungary, inside Hungarian territory.

SPEED: Swift Action Taken By Joint U. S.-Canada Board

(By International News Service)

OTTAWA, Ont.—Discarding all time-consuming formalities, members of the Canada-United States permanent joint defense board worked at top speed today as they continued their collaboration on the task of constructing a common Canadian-American front, military as well as economic, against the European dictators.

That joint economic as well as military defense was being considered was disclosed by Mayor F. H. La Guardia, of New York, chairman of the American section of the board.

"This work is the Monroe Doctrine translated into action," the mayor proclaimed after the opening day's conferences which began in the historic Canadian parliament buildings and continued at a dinner given by J. P. Moffat, the American minister to Canada, at his home.

"We are considering all phases of defense, including the economic phase," the mayor emphasized.

The conversations were kept secret and guarded and Mayor La Guardia said the first task of the board was to keep them so.

Nevertheless, it was hinted that one of the subjects to be broached by the Canadian members was the possibility of relaxing the U. S. neutrality laws so that Canada could borrow in America to finance its war aid to Great Britain. Canada's war needs in armaments and machines were believed to have been outlined in great detail.

PAVING LEAVES FOURTH STREET STORES EMPTY

Business Men Declare They Are Losing From 20 To 65 Per Cent.

chants to obtain an injunction against closing both sides of the street at the same time.

One business place—the Standard Oil company station at Mulberry and Fourth—said business had been off 40 per cent before the Mulberry crossing was closed and had fallen to 60 per cent off in the past two days, since the closing. Loss of business was estimated at $1,000 a week

Meanwhile, state highway department workers said today they would attempt to get some asphalt cut back to put down at the Walnut street intersection so it can be opened to traffic, but no action had been taken at noon today.

WPA officials on the job said they had advised the city fire and police departments of their intention to close the Mulberry street intersection, which was protested yesterday by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton as having been contrary to stipulations laid down by the city. WPA agreed to plank the Walnut street intersection after Crafton protested.

Meanwhile Fourth street continued to look as deserted as the main stem in a ghost city, while merchants sadly surveyed empty stores and silent cash registers

Here are some of their comments:

Lunchroom—It's terrible. Our business here, all for quick lunches, has dropped off 65 per cent.

Barber Shop—Off about 20 per cent. The shop people who were accustomed to parking somewhere near, have dropped off and of course the tourist business has stopped entirely

Candy Shop — Business has dropped off 30 per cent.

Shoe Shine Parlor—Our business has been reduced 50 per cent since the street closed

Lunchroom—This business was off $250 for the month of August to date.

Pet Shop—We are 50 per cent off our normal business, despite the fact that practically all of our business is with local customers They can't find places to park and they won't wal several blocks.

Hotel—Many of our regular customers find us in spite of the street being blocked off, but business is 25 per cent off normal this summer.

Filling Station — Business has been off about 40 per cent during the reconstruction of Fourth street, but since the Mulberry street intersection has been closed the decline has jumped to 60 per cent. We don't expect any appreciable increase in sales until the street is opened again. Sales have been off more than $1,000 a week

Restaurant Owner—"I'll say we can notice the difference in business since Fourth street has been closed—what business doesn't? It's the closing of both intersections that hurts. Our business has dropped off more than 30 per cent since the project started, and it seems to be getting worse"

Market — "The paving project has just about cost us all a job. Since they started this thing I have had to lay off more than two-thirds of my help because of the decrease in business. Our business has dropped off at least 40 per cent."

Flower Shop— I have done 50 per cent less business this summer than I did last year at the same time I used to get a nice tourist trade but this year I have had none I've had to depend entirely on old customers and sometimes even they can't cross the street when they do get down this way"

LULL FOLLOWS SIX-HOUR NAZI RAID ON LONDON

British Reply With Bombing Attacks on German and Italian Objectives.

tacks was centered on the vitally important Midlands industrial district, where, after dropping bombs on villages en route, German planes rained bombs on a big industrial town

An air ministry-home security ministry communique admitted that fires had been caused and industrial property damaged in two Midlands towns and that there had been numerous casualties, some fatal

German fleets crossed the coast at points ranging from northeast to southwest England.

In London, they brought the seventh air raid alarm in three days and the 16th of the war. This alarm lasted from 9:30 o'clock last night till 3:40 a. m. today, by far the war's longest.

Screaming and whistling bombs were used by the German raiders in an attack aimed perhaps as much at spreading terror as doing damage.

There were no signs that Britain was terrorized or on the way to being terrorized. But most observers agreed that the long air raid alarm in London, and air raid alarms in industrial areas, were causing day workers to lose sleep and were interrupting all night work at war factories

Reports indicated that at least three planes which took part in the London raid were shot down by anti-aircraft gunners.

Many high explosive and screamer bombs and hundreds of incendiary ones were dropped on one Midlands town, its third raid in three nights Southwest England reported its worst raid of the war. Bomber planes were overhead throughout the night and high explosive and incendiary bombs were dropped all over a big area.

Twenty bombs dropped in gardens and a woods at the edge of a southeast England town.

In a communique the air ministry had said that 46 German planes had been shot down yesterday. Loss of 15 British fighter planes was admitted but it was said that pilots of 11 were safe.

Troops, Naval Bases Bombed, Says Nazis

BERLIN —(AP)— British troop concentrations in southern England, airports and the British naval base of Portsmouth were bombed by German air raiders, the high command reported today.

The communique, covering yesterday's air operations, said Nazi fliers also returned at night and attacked the Plymouth naval base, Cornwall airport Coventry, airplane works at Birmingham and port facilities at Hull and Newcastle.

British, it said, lost a total of 70 planes yesterday—61 shot down in air battles and nine destroyed on the ground. It acknowledged German losses of 21.

Although British air attacks at several places within Germany were acknowledged and the second air alarm within as many days cost Berlin's inhabitants another night's sleep, the high command said damage was "unimportant"

Only one of a squadron of British planes was able to reach Berlin, it was said.

The raid, however, provoked an angry warning that any "criminal attack" on non-military objectives by British planes would be repaid by Nazi bombers.

During the 40-minute alarm one raider flew over the capital at a high altitude and seven others were turned back by anti-aircraft batteries at Brandenburg, 40 miles west, authorities said, but there was no repetition of the heavy cannonading which occurred here yesterday morning when British aircraft circled overhead for several hours

There was no indication bombs were dropped in the vicinity of Berlin today, but DNB, official German news agency, accused the British of bombing non-military objectives on the city's outskirts.

"London knows very well," the news agency said, "that the German air force has confined itself to military objectives in the vicinity of the English capital. English fliers on the contrary droped incendiary bombs in the vicinity of Berlin.

"This circumstance establishes that residences were the exclusive objects of the British attack. So cowardly an effort is in line with previous English attacks"

Swiss Ask Britain To Enforce Order

BERN, Switzerland —(AP)— The Swiss government today asked Great Britain to "immediately and scrupulously" enforce orders given to the Royal Air Force to cease alleged continued violations of Swiss territory in flights to Italy

The request was made in a note handed to the British foreign

Urge Extension After Trip Along Pennsylvania Thoroughfare.

PITTSBURGH — (AP) — Representatives of federal and state governments, enthusiastically praising the $70,000,000 "dream" highway after an inspection of its speed and safety features, gave attention today to Pennsylvania's next objective—extension of the superroad to Philadelphia.

Thomas H. McDonald, commissioner of federal roads, who was driven whizzing over the 160-mile Harrisburg-Pittsburgh pike in three hours' driving time yesterday, declared the extension is "imperative."

The harbor at Dover covers 600 acres and cost about $20,000,000.

Willkie Repudiates Support of Race, Religion Groups

HITS COUGHLIN AND M'WILLIAMS IN STATEMENT

Three Opinions Noted as GOP Candidate Plans to Leave New York for Home.

NEW YORK—(INS)—Wendell Willkie today flatly repudiated the support of any and all groups which support or oppose any man for his race or religion.

He spoke particularly of Father Charles E. Coughlin and Joseph McWilliams, leader of the Christian Mobilizers.

Told that Social Justice, the Coughlin paper, was apparently favoring his candidacy and that McWilliams was opposing it, he had this to say:

"If I understand what his (Coughlin's) beliefs are, I'm not only not interested, I don't want his support. There is no place in my philosophy for such beliefs. I want to make that particularly clear. I don't have to be president but I do have to keep my beliefs clear in order to live with myself.

"I'm not interested in the support of anybody who stands for any form of prejudice as to anybody's race or religion or for the support of any foreign economic or political philosophy in this country."

McWilliams had been advocating Willkie's election but the candidate was told today that last night the Christian Mobilizer chief spoke out against him.

"I'm very gratified," he said, "and I am grateful to you for telling me so that I could express my gratification.

"I want to make myself very clear that I have no sympathy with movements of that kind. I want to make myself so clear that it won't even be necessary to ask me again. I have always been and always will be unalterably opposed to such movements."

Willkie's informant indicated that McWilliams' change of heart came about after the candidate had repudiated his support at his press conference in New York on Friday. Willkie was told at that time that McWilliams was making speeches in Yorkville urging his election on anti-semitic grounds. Willkie promptly declared that he wanted no part of McWilliams or anything he stood for.

Having hammered away on national defense matters for five days in New York, which is extremely sensitive to the topic, Willkie prepared to return to Rushville, Indiana, his campaign base of operations.

Willkie had said that he would make only one or two speeches in New York and those late in the campaign but press conferences during his brief visit to Manhattan served the same purpose—that of putting his views across in the east.

In those daily sessions he registered these opinions—and incidentally continued to carry the offensive to the New Deal—on the national defense program as now constituted:

1. There should be an air secretary in the cabinet immediately and he, if elected, will combine the functions of the secretarys of war, navy and air, under a secretary of national defense.

2. The defense advisory board should be given power to act and should, without delay, be given a chairman (no chairman was named by President Roosevelt when the board was constituted).

3. The selective service (conscription) bill should be passed without delay. (This interpretation of Willkie's view came from aides who said his acceptance speech had been misinterpreted in some quarters).

STUDY SEWAGE PLAN TONIGHT

Council to Decide on Request To Employ Inspector To Check Roof Drains.

City council will decide at a special session tonight what it is going to do about the correction of one phase of Mansfield's "water-in-the cellar trouble."

A bill, sidetracked at the Aug. 6, session will come before the legislators asking for approval of a $600 appropriation to cover the cost of employing a sewer inspector.

Mayor William J. Locke has asked for the inspector to follow up the recently completed roof drain survey to see what can be done about removing the roof water from the sanitary sewer system.

City officials have contended that part of the trouble causing the surcharging of sanitary sewers is due to the illegal connections of roof drains to the sewer system. This, they say, results in the sewers backing up into basements during heavy rain storms.

In addition, council's finance committee is also expected to report on the submission of a mill levy to the voters at the November election to finance increased operations of the fire, police, parks, playgrounds and the airport.

Also up for action will be several transfer and appropriations along with numerous petitions and communications.

FEARS HE WILL BE MURDERED

Schwartz Testifies to Fright After Linking Scalise With Mobsters.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Isidore Schwartz testified today that he feared he "might be murdered" for linking Chicago mobsters with George Scalise, former president of the Building Service Employes International Union, who is on trial charged with the theft of $60,087 of union funds.

Schwartz, an organizer for Local 32 of the Building Service International and a former Scalise aide, testified yesterday that Scalise's elevation to the presidency of the international union in 1937 resulted from conferences with Frank Diamond, Charles Fiaschetti and Mike Carrozzo, three alleged members of a "Chicago mob," in a Chicago restaurant.

Scalise's attorney pressed Schwartz to explain why he had not told the district attorney's office of the alleged mob connections before last week.

"I was very much afraid to talk until then," Schwartz answered.

He said he was still afraid, and when the attorney, Martin W. Littleton, continued to question him about the subject, he volunteered:

"I was afraid I would be murdered and I still think I might be murdered."

Motorists Save Hikers Life By Prompt First Aid

COLUMBUS — (U.P.)—Quick first aid treatment by two passing motorists was credited today for saving the life of William Chalmers, 35, Bennington, W. Va., victim of a hit-run automobile driver.

J. B. Manson, Crawfordsville, Ind., and Paul McCutcheon, of Springfield, found Chalmers lying unconscious last night beside the roadway of U. S. No. 40, three miles west of West Jefferson.

He was bleeding from a severe cut in his left arm which had been fractured. Manson and McCutcheon applied a tourniquet and called an ambulance.

Chalmers was reported in fair condition today in a Columbus hospital. He may have internal injuries. State highway patrolmen said Chalmers, a hitch-hiker, apparently was struck by a westbound car which did not stop after the accident.

OLD WORLD CUSTOMS BLAMED IN PLIGHT OF 2 BOYS, 2 GIRLS

Clashing of old world customs and American ideas was held responsible today by Probate Judge C. J. Anderson for the plight of the two young girls and two boys who ran away from home last week and were apprehended in Chicago three days later.

Judge Anderson, who heard the case yesterday in juvenile court, said that he had continued it indefinitely and that in the meantime the four runaways and the youthful Mansfield hitch-hiker they picked up, would report to him weekly.

Specific charge against the quartet, all under 18, was "attempt to enter into a marriage state without the parents' consent" and "endangering the morals of their fellow conspirators and themselves."

The judge said the case grew out of a runaway spree last week in which two school girls and two boys took a car and drove to Chicago. Police broadcast a description of them and the license number of the car. They were picked up in Forest Park, near Chicago, when they ran out of gas. Court records listed their names as Rosie Vetrano, 15, of 223 North Franklin street; Rose Fava, 16, of 144 Columbia avenue; John Bachman, 17, of 188½ North Main street, and Gene Dute, 16, of 85½ Cowl street. The hitch-hiker was Joe Asbury, 14, 113 West Fourth street.

Judge Anderson said that the girls told him they wanted to get away from the strict discipline of their homes. He said the parents, who held to the old world customs, contended that the first time a boy called at the home to see a girl that his intentions were to marry her.

He said that at least one of the parents insisted that one of the boys marry their daughter, despite the fact that he is only 17 years old and makes only $5 a week. Judge Anderson said that the testimony of the boys and girls, borne out by a Mansfield physician, was that the girls had not been violated during the three-day flight.

Judge Anderson quoted one of the fathers as saying he would shoot the boy if he ever set foot in his home again.

The youthful couples had talked some of marriage, the judge said, but hadn't made application up to the time they were apprehended. He said one of the girls refused to return to her home because of "intolerable conditions" and that she had gone to the detention home at the Salvation Army in preference to returning home. Her mother told him, the judge said, that the girl couldn't return home unless her youthful admirer married her, as they considered the escapade had "disgraced" her.

Judge Anderson said young Asbury, who is a "chronic run-away and hitch-hiker," and served as guide to the quartet after they picked him up. He will have to report to juvenile court weekly from now on.

Charges of contributing to the delinquency of minors were filed against Edward P. Conneff, Oakenwald avenue, who is said to have loaned his car to the runaways. He was slated to appear before Judge Anderson this afternoon.

Mansfield News-Journal
AN INDEPENDENT NEWSPAPER
MANSFIELD, OHIO, TUESDAY, AUGUST 27, 1940.

It may be something of a shock to Hitler to learn that Great Britain is quite confidently signing 99-year leases.

Some of those young fellows who got married to escape a year's training may find they've taken on a lifetime of it.

More pronounced optimists are expressing belief that Indian Summer will soon put an end to the August cold wave.

Alien Registration Starts

STARTING today the United States government, through its department of justice, enters upon the task of registering and finger-printing the estimated 3,600,000 aliens in this country.

This registration and finger-printing is to be done through postoffices over the country and is compulsory, with a heavy fine and imprisonment as the penalty for failure or refusal to register and be finger-printed, or for making registration statements known to be false.

It has heretofore been explained, and is again emphasized, that no alien who legally entered this country and who is loyal to it, has anything to fear as a result of registration and finger-printing. As President Roosevelt said, this procedure contains no implication of suspicion or hostility toward those who, while not citizens, "are loyal to this country and its institutions."

Although this plan, as the president also said, is designed primarily for the nation's protection, it should inure to the advantage of all law-abiding aliens "who are its guests." A receipt card will be sent to every alien who registers, as evidence of satisfactory compliance with the law.

Registration and finger-printing is required of all aliens 14 years of age, or older, and alien children under the age of 14 must be registered by parents or guardians.

No registration charge is made and a warning has been issued against swindlers attempting to make a charge for assisting registrants. It is explained that postoffice employes assigned to the work will give every possible help to registrants.

Blanks are provided, with spaces for required information, which can be taken home and filled out, after which the regular registration form will be typed at the postoffice and finger-prints taken.

Arrests, indictments or convictions, if any, for violations of law, are to be listed, also affiliation or non-affiliation with any organizations devoted to influencing or furthering the political activities, public relations or public policy of a foreign government.

It is suggested that informed and well-intentioned native-born and naturalized American citizens might perform a worthwhile service to alien friends or acquaintances by explaining the purposes and requirements of registration, so that they may be made to understand the importance of registering promptly.

Defense Production Stepping Up

DOUBT gives way to confidence as the vast American rearmament program gets under way. Since the airplane is now the most important weapon, plane production offers the best criterion. In this field progress is immensely faster than it was in the last war. William S. Knudsen, production chief of the national defense commission, recently announced that the output of warplanes had reached a rate of nearly 11,000 a year, and by next January would be past the rate of 18,000 a year.

With such acceleration, the president's demand for 50,000 planes a year doesn't look so impossible as it seemed when first made. And if the British can hold out, there may be, some time next year, all the warplanes needed by both countries.

There is reassurance, too, in the statement from Mr. Knudsen that there can be ready this fall enough uniforms and general equipment for an army of 400,000 men. "Substantial deliveries" of fighting material are to be expected by January and should be "going at a good rate" by next spring.

New 'Ham and Eggs' Plan

THE "HAM AND EGGS" pension scheme is a hardy perennial in California. For the third time voters in that state will find such a pension plan on the ballots in November.

The proposal this year, sponsored by the Retirement Life Payment association, calls for the payment of $20 a week to persons over 50 years of age, with certain qualifications, and $7 a week to certain unemployed persons not over 50 years old. The payments would not be made with cash, but with special "warrants" valued at one dollar each. The pension proposal would also make drastic changes in the state's tax laws.

Sponsors of this measure obtained 212,159 signatures, 42 more than necessary to qualify an initiative measure for the ballot. But it's easier to get petitions signed than it is to get votes on election day. California's people rejected similar proposals in 1938 and 1939. They are likely to reject the 1940 scheme, too, if they can be made to understand its impracticability.

Stored Gold May Be Useful

WITH $22,000,000,000 in gold stored in the United States, nearly half of it in the bomb-proof vaults at Fort Knox, Ky., bankers are saying that the tidal wave of gold imports probably reached its high point in June after the collapse of France. From now on they expect the flow of gold to this country to diminish. The reason is simple: most of the world's gold reserves are already here.

There is difference of opinion as to the future of that vast store. Some Americans fear that the totalitarian countries will figure out some other new medium of exchange and do what the Nazis threaten—put gold as the world's chief form of money into complete eclipse.

Other American authorities, however, are coming to the view that the United States' tremendous gold stock is a good thing. The totalitarians may get along within their own borders without gold, but they'll go on needing it and wanting it for all outside dealings.

The metal, these authorities say, will maintain its ancient value as the chief international medium of exchange and will continue important as the base of credit and currency in the United States.

According to Berlin: "In every country where there is a German there is a German front"—but not so famous as in the good old days when Milwaukee made but one claim to fame.

New York Vote Seen as Big Factor

—By CARTER FIELD

WASHINGTON — More and more indications are that the Empire State will decide the presidential election. If President Roosevelt carries it, from present indications it will not make a great deal of difference what happens in most of the other states now regarded as doubtful. If Wendell Willkie carries New York, the extreme probability is that he will be elected.

This is due of course in large part to the fact that New York has 47 electoral votes—quite a sizable chunk out of a total of only 266 necessary to elect! But it is due also to the trend idea. That is to say that if there is enough swing in sentiment away from the New Deal to make it possible for Willkie to win in New York, it will be almost inevitable that the same swing against Roosevelt will be manifested in other states.

It is quite possible that the election will be close—so close that, even with the swing element considered, the carrying of New York by a bare few hundred would be sufficient to give the winner the election.

* * *

THIS estimate is based largely on reports from a number of other states. As the picture looks now—always allowing for a complete upset due to some incalculated move by Roosevelt, or by a political tide not yet in evidence—Willkie should carry all six of the New England states. He should carry New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Ohio, Indiana, Wisconsin and Michigan.

West of the Mississippi he should carry both Dakotas, Iowa, Minnesota (which is actually on both sides of the river), Wyoming, Kansas, Nebraska, Colorado, Idaho and Oregon.

Roosevelt should carry all the Solid South, all the so-called border states—Maryland, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, and Oklahoma. He should carry Arizona, New Mexico, California, Washington and Montana. Utah is highly doubtful; but is has only 4 electoral votes.

This enumeration leaves out New York and Illinois. If Willkie carries the states in which it is indicated he has an edge, plus New York and Illinois, he will win.

But all the word from Illinois is that Willkie has the edge there. The Gallup poll gives him 53 to 47 for Roosevelt. The "Pathfinder" poll figures a ratio of 61.4 to 38.6. Cynics might point out that the Pathfinedr poll was electing Alf M. Landon right through the campaign of 1936, but the present editor of this magazine is none other than Emil Hurja, whose magic figures guided Jim Farley's predictions in 1932 and 1936.

* * *

THIS WRITER has frequently commented that all polls meet their Waterloo sooner or later. The "New York Herald" poll was a political Bible until 1916, when it "carried" California for Charles E. Hughes by two to one. The "Literary Digest" poll was regarded as pretty nearly infallible until its tragic disaster of 1936.

The trouble is that there are too many elements in any given political situation which defy any poll save that made by the precinct captains of absolutely top-notch political machines. And even then one has to discount a little, because the precinct captains may have their own motives for not revealing their findings even to their own chiefs.

Maybe they want to be prepared against a MUST order to deliver more of a majority on election day. In that case, they make their reports less favorable to their side than the facts. Maybe they want a little more money thrown into their precincts. In which case they do the same thing. Or maybe they want to justify money already spent. In which case they do the reverse.

Looking Back

TWENTY YEARS AGO TODAY

Friday, August 27, 1920.

Fourteen-year-old Edmond Miller, Springmill street, sustained fractured leg when knocked from his bicycle by automobile.

Lightning struck old college building in Hayesville but only the belfry was damaged by fire.

Wallace Reid in "Excuse My Dust" was screen attraction at the Majestic.

Woodland had been platted and was in readiness for sale of lots.

FIVE YEARS AGO TODAY

Tuesday, August 27, 1935.

The Richland county budget commission served notice on city officials that $111,000 had been lopped off city budget requests for municipal functions in 1936.

Theft was reported at the Franklin Finance company by L. B. Hamilton, secretary and manager.

School officials were preparing schedules for more than 12,000 pupils who would enter the fall term.

Temperature tumbled to 46 degrees.

Announcement was made that $260,000 was paid out in refunds to consumers by the Ohio Fuel Gas company.

Listen, World!

"It Might Be!"

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

(To Jack—whose faith and courage have brought my long-dead faith alive.)

* * *

REMEMBER how I told you, long ago, of the dear lad who went away? And the bleak years that followed. Then, finally, that glad day when I bought a small red chair for another little tad?

Dark days they were—when the small fellow came. Grief can drain your heart more than you know—until you try to use it again. I had thought I'd stayed hopeful and brave. But when those baby eyes looked into mine I knew I'd failed. Somewhere, during the long, black night, my faith had gone. How was I going to meet this urgent, young demand?

Dear little son—he showed me the way, himself. Boy-like, eager for adventure and delight, he began asking questions. Would we find this— or that —? Would this happen — ? Would this Wonderful Thing be waiting when we got to There? And, out of my broken dreams, I answered patiently and wisely—so I thought.

"No darling," I would say, "I'm afraid it won't. You see, things don't happen that way, sonny. There's so much work to do. So many things in the way. It hardly ever happens the way we want—"

And then he'd look at me, his great eyes curious, challenging as a new bright flame. Then suddenly his face would break in smiles. Head cocked, like a small brave robin, he would cry

"IT MIGHT BE!" little Jack said.

"IT MIGHT BE!" My sick heart hardened at that first courageous thrust at my despair.

"IT MIGHT BE!" What I wondered—could this small child know of life's cruel betrayals? How could he guess that all our dearest dreams would crumble—when at least we thought them safe. Only his ignorance, surely, prompted that sure reply — "It might be!"

So I reasoned. So had dead millions before me reasoned—when the light went out. But here was one small spirit bright with the glow of dawn. And always when I thought to kindly temper his enthusiasm with my dark philosophy, he had one answer only—constantly—

"IT MIGHT BE — MAYBE!" said dear little Jack.

"It might be!" Day after day he met my hopelessness with that clear shaft of faith. A faith as natural as his healthy breath or appetite. As lovely as the spring that bloomed across our way . . . as gay as the small puppies romping through the house . . . the toys I tumbled over on the tidy rugs . . . the laughter that crept slowly to my own reluctant lips.

"It might be!" No fear or disappointment could withstand that brave, young cry!

Voice through the darkness . . . hand in the pit . . . light in the grave . . . slowly but surely that young voice pierced through to me. I had lost hope of happiness. I had lost faith in fairness. I had lost grip on life—and its sure circle of renewal. But now a baby's voice mocked at my grief and my despair. Against all broken dreams . . . all fallen stars . . . all tears and graves and torturing uncertainties—a child's voice cried—"IT MIGHT BE!"

Three words. And yet they rolled away the stone that blocked my heart . . . the long despair that blocked my faith and joy . . . and brought me back to life. Not ignorance, but wisdom—fresh from God—had brought me back to life. A wisdom yet untainted by our human fear—

"A little child shall lead you!" He had said.

A little child has led me - back to hope.

And when new darkness threatens, still I hear the brave, bright challenge of that baby voice —

"IT MIGHT BE!" Jack says—and I take a chance.

Bullitt May Air Views On Stump; Knudsen Irked By Defense Delays

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Ambassador Bill Bullitt, most versatile and volatile of all Roosevelt's diplomats, probably will go on the stump throughout the country campaigning for "national unity" and urging American support for Great Britain.

His tour will be divorced from the New Deal, and he will not return to his embassy in France.

Many of the men around Roosevelt now are far ahead of him in proposing aid to Britain, and some of them may cooperate with Bullitt in this movement. Some are definitely critical of the president, though close friend Bullitt is not. They feel that Roosevelt has been holding back, and that the country is ready to go much further than he.

Note—Bullitt received 4,000 letters and telegrams after his radio address warning the nation that the United States faced immediate invasion from Hitler if England failed. Only about ten of the letters were critical.

Defense Blows Up.

IF CERTAIN legislative and administrative snarls in the defense program aren't cleared up quickly, there is going to be a blow-up in the Defense Commission that will knock a dent in the Roosevelt administration. Some fast footwork and placating White House palaver has kept the explosive situation under cover so far, but it is very serious.

Inside fact is that William Knudsen, who gave up a $300,000-a-year General Motors job to become defense production chief, is getting restive over the delays he is encountering. He has made no threats, but he has also made it clear that unless he gets action he does not intend to continue in a position where he could be blamed for lack of production.

A "plain operations man," as he describes himself, Knudsen worked out a schedule of production for tanks, guns, planes, armor plate, and the other vital essentials for defense. But these plans, partly because of tax delays, partly because of business sit-downs, have encountered repeated obstructions.

For example: Knudsen was first told that the amortization problem, which has held up the construction of several new defense plants, would be handled in congress in a separate bill. But at the last minute, treasury tax experts objected to this and insisted that the matter be included in the excess (war profits) tax bill.

Next Knudsen was assured by congressional leaders that the tax bill would be passed by Aug. 17. But first the Republicans recessed to attend the Willkie acceptance ceremonies at Elwood; and then last week, on the verge of finally reporting out a bill, the house ways and means committee got into a brawl and the legislation was postponed again.

* * *

RFC Loan Delays.

WHILE this dilly-dallying was going on at Capitol Hill, Knudsen was having other difficulties with Federal Loan Administrator Jesse Jones.

The RFC was given wide powers by congress several months ago to make loans to industry for defense purposes. But when Knudsen submitted a list of plant expansions that needed financing, Jones balked.

He objected on the ground that one-third of the output of the plants would go to fill British war orders. Knudsen pointed out that this was not impairing U. S. preparedness, but on the contrary was providing the country with vital productive capacity at the expense of the British.

Still Jones, despite the president's policy of extending every assistance to the British, didn't like the idea of lending U. S. government money to aid factory expansion for the British.

Note—Much of the tax delay in congress is the result of business opposition to any real tax program, and some of Knudsen's advisers are strongly with them on that. However, Knudsen personally is not.

* * *

Barefoot Boy.

SIX months ago there was some expectation that Justice Owen J. Roberts of the Supreme Court might be pried loose from his marble retreat to run for the presidency on the Republican ticket. But what is he doing now?

Latest reports describe him as wading barefoot in the soft sand and shallow pools of Brandywine Creek.

Roberts has a country estate at Kimberton, near Phoenixville, Pa. In the long summer recess of the court, he spends his time there in the leisure of a country squire.

Justice Roberts loves the feel of sand and soft mud between his toes, and takes no shoes to the Brandywine or the Octoraro.

On these two creeks, he and his friend Frank B. Foster venture forth in a canoe. The creeks are seldom more than waist deep, but for safety's sake, the two dignitaries post a chauffeur at the nearest bridge, so that, in case of emergency, he may act as lifeguard.

* * *

Appeasement Ambassador.

REGARDLESS of whether Ambassador Cudahy was misquoted by the British press, there is no doubt that his backstage conversation with state department officials favored "appeasement" in the extreme.

The Germans he described as a great race, doing many fine things for Europe. He said it was necessary for us to deal with them.

The British he described as causing most of the trouble in Europe. It was absolutely necessary, Cudahy said, to get the British to change their tune.

One thing that seemed to impress the ambassador particularly was that the Nazis put troops around the Catholic churches in Belgium to prevent Freemasons and Protestants from coming near them.

* * *

Farley and Italians.

JIM FARLEY continued working for Roosevelt right up until his resignation as chairman of the Democratic national committee. One of the last things he did was to ask Tommy D'Alesandro, dynamic congressman from Baltimore, to visit the Italian districts in the big cities and campaign for Roosevelt.

Congressman D'Alesandro has six children, of whom the fifth is named Franklin Delano Roosevelt D'Alesandro, and he is just as ardent a rooter for the president as the name implies. He has told Jim Farley that the Italian districts can be swung to Roosevelt easily.

Note—Farley also asked Senator Tydings of Maryland, against whom Roosevelt once waged a vigorous primary campaign, to make some speeches for the president. Tydings said he would be too busy. However, he is not bolting to Willkie.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — The number of persons working for the United States government is now well over one million. The civil service commission has given out figures for June. They add up to 1,011,066 working for you and me and Uncle Sam.

Approximately 134,000 of these work in Washington, the rest out over the land, or somewhere between Point Barrow, Alaska and Little America, Antarctica.

Something like 86,000 of the nation's new helpers have been added in the last year. The defense drive, of course, is given as the reason. About 70,000 of these are new employes of the war and navy departments, the civil aeronautics board and the Panama Canal zone.

This is the first time the number on the federal payroll has gone over a million. The World war payroll peak was 987,857.

* * *

Capital Business Booms.

NOTE to merchants: How are you doing? We are doing fine.

For example, "Washington merchants are looking forward to the busiest autumn on record. Foreshadowing the fall advance, department store sales here reached new all-time highs for both July and the first seven months of the year. July sales were 16.7 per cent above July last year . . . and stood 26.5 per cent above the same month in 1929. The first seven months were 6.5 per cent ahead of last year and 21.2 per cent over the same period in 1929."

* * *

Half Wet, Half Dry.

TO ALL states, counties and cities who still have prohibition headaches: Pity the poor hostesses of a popular Washington cafe on 20th street, northwest. When customers enter, the hostesses have to say: "Are you going to have a drink?"

They get answers all the way from "What business is it of yours?" to "Sure, if it's on the house." But they have to keep asking and if the answer is yes, the young ladies then come up with the further startler: "Then you'll have to sit on this side—the other side is dry."

This business of reducing local option to a neighborhood lot comes about because congress passed a law for the district that there can be no places dispensing liquor in the residential sections and the dividing line runs right smack through the middle of this cafe.

* * *

The Boys Are Outsmarted.

NOTE to Gen. George C. Marshall, army chief of staff: When congress acts on the president's request for authority to call out the national guard and reserve officers for military duty, you are probably going to have about 30 to 40 unhappy Washington newspapermen on your hands.

When things began looking so black a few months back about that many boys around here, with military experience, dashed down to the war department and got themselves reserve commissions or got their reserve commissions renewed. They were going to be smart. If war came, they were going to be officers. Now, if and when the president calls up the reserves, those boys have got to do a year's service. Are they mad!

A Farmer's Diary

All They Owned

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

I DROVE along the western side of a rugged mountain, where a village stood with porches edging the highway. Some of the homes were of logs, chunked and daubed. Nearly all had massive limestone chimneys. Farther up, to the left, upon a bank was a modest, weatherbeaten church with a rusted bell. A cemetery adjoined it at side and rear. I walked along the edge, looking at the headstones.

Some of the thin old marble slabs near the road leaned dangerously. The native limestone monuments were straighter and more solid. Myrtle and dewberry briers had covered sunken graves with a dark green mantle. Two cedars with trailing branches obscured that part of the cemetery behind the church. I thought I heard voices and peered through.

A white-haired couple stood beside a grassy mound. Both their faces were thin and deeply wrinkled. The old man wore a flowing beard, the old lady had a white lace cap upon her snowy hair. His arm crept around her shoulder, as I watched, and she looked up at him and smiled with tear-wet eyes.

She had tied on a gray checked apron over her black dress. He had a basket with some geranium slips and vines and a trowel. Stiffly they got down on their knees on each side of the grave and she placed the flowers in the holes he made until a lovely row of green was along the crest. Then with difficulty, for his old knees were shaky, he got up and gave her a hand to help her regain her footing.

I stood by my car and waited for them to come through the rustic gate onto the highway.

"Do you live hereabouts?" I asked.

They looked surprised—"No,"—he answered in a thin high voice, "we live nigh 50 miles off. A truck man we know fetched us down this mornin'. He had to come anyway. We just set out some flowers on our daughter's grave. We've kept it green and planted flowers every year since Mary died.

"We bought that lot more'n 35 years ago. It's all we've got left of the land we owned. We used to live in that village there, and go to this church. This mountainside will always be a restful place. There's room for her and me when we come back to stay. I like the trees, and them tall rocks outside always seemed kinda comfortin'."

I watched them walk slowly down the road, side by side. The sun was on the edge of the western mountain.

CHAPTER II

Amy looked at Carol. It was a sympathetic glance at her slender fairness accentuated by the crisp blue linen frock and at the dark eyes which nothing, Amy knew, had troubled this past happy year. And she was thinking not only of Carol but of her good friend Robert Tallant and of Alan when she said, "She's Edwina Burke and she has come back home in rather characteristic style."

But Carol's eyes were not troubled by the sound of that name. Her lashes flickered a little and her curved brows parted ever so slightly. Carol wasn't afraid, Amy thought, and she was glad. She said, "I suggest that you both go before officers and reporters corner you. Fortunately, it's just the sort of day when people sleep at their jobs."

"Thank you," Norman said "You've certainly taken a lot off my mind. I'll be back to see her and talk over the damage to her car. And I'll report the accident to the police."

"There's time enough for that." Her smile was thoughtful yet amused. How pleased Edwina would be to see the most interesting-looking young man that she, Amy, had seen in a long time. Edwina and the luck of the Irish, she thought. Edwina and her nine fabulous lives and now this personable young stranger who would live somewhere near the huge shining white house which Patrick Burke, Edwina's father, had built on the highest hill outside Newton some years before his death. Lucky Edwina, who had come home at last.

Amy turned to Carol "Has Robert broken a hundred yet? Tell him that as soon as I can get a little time we're going to play together"

"I shall. And I'll come out and watch you."

"And remember me to Alan" Why hadn't Edwina waited until Carol and Alan were married before she came back?"

"Of course. Goodbye."

"Goodbye," Norman said. "And thanks a lot."

* * *

On the street he took a deep breath of relief and smiled down at Carol. Then suddenly he gave a start and the quick frown that had become so familiar drew his dark brows together. "Wait a minute: Edwina Burke, she said. Do you know who Edwina Burke is?"

Carol thrust her hands into the pockets of her dress and shook back her hair. "Yes, I know. She's the richest girl in Newton. "She's . . ."

"She's headlines and broken engagements!" He laughed. "And this is her home town? She's been in New York. She was singing in a night club there last winter—one of those crooning heiresses. I saw her, heard her." He seemed much amused as, with a sweeping gesture he pushed back his hair. "Everything happens to me. Edwina Burke! Good Lord, I can't believe it! I was racing dynamite! But you told me you didn't know her." and the black eyes, gay once more, challenged her.

"I don't. I'd never really seen her before Only her pictures in the papers, and I couldn't see her well enough to recognize her. She hasn't been home for five years." Since . . .

But he was holding open the car door, saying, "I'm a stranger here myself. Where to, madamoiselle? It is madamoiselle, not madame, I hope."

"Not madame—quite yet."

He laughed. "That's bad. Very bad. Why did you have to tell me after all we've been to each other?"

Carol said, smiling, "I'm going to direct you to the main boulevard which will take you directly out to the country club. You can get information there."

"I'm going to take you home first."

'If you do, you'll get lost. No, the boulevard is only a couple of blocks from my home and I've some errands to do on the way." She wanted a few blocks to walk and think! "Don't you know where you're going to live this summer?"

"Haven't the vaguest notion. Sounds crazy, doesn't it? But pneumonia took an awful crack at me earlier in the spring and the powers that be, meaning my business associates and friends, decided that the summer in the country would fix me up fine. Dick Fenton, who used to live here and who has been living in New York for several years, offered his house. So here I am, the docile lad, feeling perfectly fit. Dick says that the countryside outside Newton, out in the hills, is a veritable Eden, that the people are swell and that I'll have an elegant time. What do you think?"

"I don't know very much about the people out there. I go to the country club occasionally but my father and I don't belong. The people who have estates out in the hills, you see, are the wealthy people of Newton. My father is a suburban physician with a suburban practice."

* * *

He shot a quick glance at her. "I didn't think you were small town. You don't look it."

"I am now. I'm going to marry a Newton boy, Alan Harding."

Carol said, "The next street is the boulevard."

When he stopped the car, she stepped out quickly and stood on the sidewalk, feeling impetuous dark eyes sweep over her. He could be serious and he could be abandoned, she thought, and there was little that escaped his alert attention. Many things about him, the expensive car, the well-cut but casual appearing tweeds, spoke of material resources Perhaps his was a name she should know, an important name. But it was of no consequence to her and she could dismiss him, leave him here and now, thinking only how utterly he was unlike Alan.

"Will you come to see me when I'm in jail?" he asked. "Pass me a cigaret through the bars? Edwina Burke is a gal of importance around these parts. I wonder how her sense of humor is."

"I wonder, too," Carol thought. "I've wondered so often."

She said, "I can't tell you that but I can tell you that if you stay on the boulevard you'll come to the country club and some one there will direct you to your friend's house."

"Thanks. And I don't suppose there's any law against my getting ill again and needing . . . a suburban physician and nurse." His eyes were laughing, and the carved mouth flashed a smile as the car moved ahead slowly. "Good-bye, Carol."

Here eyes followed him for a block. Already he was exceeding the speed limit.

* * *

Slowly she walked toward home, her thoughts turned back to Edwina, memories crystallizing. Yet, Edwina's return, she firmly believed, was as inconsequential as the advent of Norman. Occasionally Edwina's face would stare from the page of a newspaper and that would be all—as far as she and Alan were concerned. Their lives, Edwina's and Alan's, would not touch and meet and clash as once they had, leaving Alan with a resentment for Edwina frightening in its intensity. No, it was over, a finished thing of a youthful error, that brief, disastrous humiliating marriage of Alan and Edwina three years before she, Carol, had come to Newton.

She had met Alan for the first time when she was summoned to nurse his mother, as she had her own, through her last illness. During the four weeks that Carol, a quiet, efficient figure in white, had moved about their apartment, she had come to love Mary Harding and to feel her approaching death deeply. And though Alan's devotion to his mother had touched her, he had treated Carol with a formality that approached unfriendliness.

It was Amy Durfee who had come to dinner one evening with Carol and her father who tried to explain Alan. "All his life since his father died when he was a small boy, he has felt a great obligation to his mother. Alan was the brightest boy in school, a student leader, a fine athlete. They were poor. Mary Harding worked as a saleswoman in a small shop until Alan finished law school. They went through a great struggle together. I'm glad she lived to see him a promising attorney with an office of his own. You think he's an odd young man, don't you, Carol? I suppose he is rather off the standard but he's had no time for fun or for girls. There was one but . . . well, my dear, that's quite another story."

* * *

After Mrs. Harding's death they had not met again until one Sunday afternoon at the old quarry, which had filled with water and which had become a favorite swimming spot, she had seen Alan, had spoken, and he had joined her little party for a picnic supper. The following week he telephoned and he had not ceased to telephone since that day. Soon their "going together" became an accepted thing and no one was surprised when their engagement was announced some weeks ago.

She had come to know him slowly, had slowly scratched the surface of his nature, delving deep beneath his reticence, his shyness, his undemonstrativeness. Slowly, too, she had come to love him as her admiration for his high principles of honesty and justice grew. With the exception of her father and mother, he was the kindest person she had ever known and she had come to know, too, the ardor beneath the cool exterior, his idealism, his ambition. The first time she heard him in court she understood why the people of prominence were predicting a brilliant career for him. Not upon a display of personal charm or an appeal to emotionalism did he depend but upon a brilliantly prepared case given in his clear, confident voice.

In a few years his progress had been amazing. A member of the country club, he took Carol there for dinner and dancing occasionally though she knew that his appearance was only for reasons of "good business", and that he preferred his old, less affluent friends in Newton and found that the country club set too smart and to sophisticated for his taste. There was still another reason — Edwina Burke. Carol guessed that the country club was a sharp reminder of his student days and Edwina, and that to some he was not a young man with a future but still the shabby boy Edwina had added to her collection of men.

It had been as if the words were being forcefully and painfully pulled from him when he told her about Edwina, and she had known that Alan could hate as intensely as he could love. "This is the whole truth," he had said and his words had colored Edwina and brought her vividly to life, making her a girl Carol had wondered about for two years. They had not spoken of her since. Carol had told her father; he had looked interested and said little. Of her engagement he had said, drawing her close and putting his arms around her, "You've made a wise choice, dear. You'll have a successful marriage. Alan is a fine boy."

* * *

They had decided that night, rather against her will, that she would work no more except to assist her father with his office patients. Her savings were adequate for her trousseau and she and Alan had decided upon an unpretentious wedding and a cruise for a honeymoon. Until they built a home, they would live in Alan's small but attractive apartment in town. Dr. Tallant cheerfully refused to be a problem.

Bringing herself away from the past, from plans and from the adventure of the day, Carol realized that Alan was coming to dinner tonight, a night when her father had no office hours. As the twilight colors streaked the sky, she realized, too, that it was late and that her father and Alan were probably wondering about her. Thinking of them, she went into a store and bought strawberries and whipping cream, remembering that Rosie had said the grocer boy had forgotten them. This was real and this was she, she thought happily, hurrying now. About Edwina there was glamour and unreality, a life so different from hers that it was difficult to comprehend. And Norman Alexander's life, too, perhaps . . . The thought of him made her smile.

She welcomed the sight of home and Alan's car, a beige coupe, parked at the gate. Going in, she gave Rosie the strawberries and cream, inquired about the funeral and went to the rear garden . . .

Dr. Tallant, tall, thin, distinguished, with thin dark hair and a face healthily tanned, was clipping roses for the dining-room table. Beside him, some inches shorter than Dr. Tallant and with a hard athlete's body and thick fair hair and intense blue eyes, stood Alan immaculate in white linen, his favorite pipe between his teeth.

Going to Alan, putting her arm through his, Carold held up her mouth to be kissed.

"Hello, darling . . ."

Dr Tallant smiled. "I hope you didn't forget the strawberries and cream. Rosie made a cake for them. Where have you been anyway?"

"I'll tell you later. No, I didn't forget. Excuse me while I freshen up a bit and change my dress?"

Room Should Be Attractive, Livable For Real Comfort

By JANE FLOYD BUCK

Don't be satisfied merely with an attractive room but make sure that it is livable.

This is the advice of one of the country's best known decorators—Paul MacAlister—to American homemakers. Mr. MacAlister says that about 65 per cent of the homes in America are not truly livable because the women who assemble them overlook the four fundamental principles of livability. Here are his suggestions for making your home really livable.

First of all be sure that your room does not create a feeling of claustrophobia. There is no better way to eliminate that "hemmed in" feeling, says MacAlister, than by correct use of good plate glass mirrors. Use of mirrors to obtain reflected views of other mirrors, good furniture groupings, fireplaces and views from windows. Overcome the problem of badly proportioned rooms by astute use of mirrored plate glass panelling.

Next on his list is "underfoot comfort." This means proper carpeting. If you have rugs, be sure that they are anchored down so that your guests don't come sliding into the room. If you prefer carpeting to rugs, have it wall to wall if possible. This will eliminate an extra burden of cleaning, make the room appear larger and make it feasible to place chairs and tables near the wall without having them look as if they would tip over.

No room is livable without correct lighting. Mr. MacAlister reminds us. Have the light well distributed but avoid all-over glare. Light around conversation groupings should be rather dim. Wherever there is a comfortable lounge or chair there should also be a light adequate for reading.

Finally, take thought of your color schemes and combinations. Correct color is practically a Webster definition for comfort and livability. Colors that do not harmonize jar nerves and create a feeling of restlessness. When selecting colors consider each room with relation to the rest of the rooms in the house.

Build your rooms on these four principles and you can be sure of a livable home, Mr. MacAlister declares.

Man Wants Reconciliation With Wife

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

We have been married seven years and have one child, whom we adore. I have left my wife several times, and each time I didn't have the courage to go home because I lost so much gambling. We've been separated now for eight months, but on a recent visit she said we needed each other and she'd consider a reconciliation.

Right now she is working and keeping up the home, while I am not, but expect a position in a couple of weeks. My wife's parents object to her taking me back. They said if she did they wouldn't have anything more to do with her, even though they know she is in love with me. But my wife is willing to forgive me, provided I get a position and save some money.

I love her more now than ever and do want to make her happy. What do you think of this state of affairs?

A. F. P.

Don't you think it might be a good idea if you got the job you're expecting and were well established in it and had a little margin saved before you presented yourself as a candidate for reconciliation with your wife? At the present time she's "bringing home the bacon." And it's not hard to understand how her parents feel about reinstating you as her husband.

You should prove to all parties concerned — wife and her parents, as well—that you absolutely have given up gambling.

* * *

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

The girl I'm going with at present has well-to-do parents, and they give her a very generous allowance. She wastes most of it on this and that foolishness, while I'm really hard up. I have a job but don't make much. This girl never notices that I don't have much, and though I've hinted she has never offered to lend me a cent.

I know she loves me, and we're planning to marry as soon as I get a substantial raise. Do you think it would be O. K. for me to borrow from her occasionally?

FRED.

If you hope to marry your "heiress," it seems to me that it would be very risky for you to borrow from her. A penny has often turned the current of friendship, and a borrowing friend soon takes on the aspect of an enemy. Don't borrow if you're in earnest with this girl.

* * *

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I'm 18 years old and the man I love is 30. He's also in love with me and we want to be married next spring. I live with my married sister, and although she likes my fiance, she objects to our marriage because I'm still so young. I'm attending college and am already on the lookout for a job.

My fiance has an excellent position and is putting aside some money, so I'm hoping we won't have to start our married life with a lot of debts for furniture and such things. We want to announce our engagement in the fall.

MARGARET.

Your fiance seems to be a very sensible young man, especially since he is putting aside something toward your marriage. I sincerely hope you will wait until the money for the furniture and other things is in hand. All sorts of unlooked-for expenditures crop up after marriage — things one never thought about before—and if there isn't any money to meet these incidentals, friction is likely to occur.

Twelve years difference in ages doesn't really count. The question in my mind, in regard to a girl marrying then as young as are, is: Will she regret later on having given up so much of her youth?

HELP BRITAIN

GIMLI, Man.—(U.P.)—Icelanders of western Canada and the northwestern sections of the United States have pledged themselves "to help Britain and Canada win the war for freedom."

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

By ALFRED HITCHCOCK
Motion Picture Director
(Tending wickets for vacationing Robbin Coons)

HOLLYWOOD—Once a movie fan wrote me to inquire: "What is this thing called 'the Hitchcock touch' in your pictures?"

I'm sure I can't answer unless I simply say "I try to do the unexpected." I think folks go to the theater to be shocked, surprised and thrilled. I don't think they go to "figure out" a picture, so much as they go to be swept away from their problems by something new, novel and exciting.

We live in an exciting age and most people expect their entertainment to move along at a fast pace. I find most theater-goers want to participate in an exciting story. I think every film fan always will want to be the third person at every wedding, in every love scene and in every exciting happening in a picture. So, I like to give them plenty to keep them interested, participating and excited about.

* * *

I think the camera (which represents the audience) should keep moving, weaving in and out, getting as close to intimate scenes as possible. I think a stationary camera makes a picture's action seem impersonal. Frequently I take the camera way up in the air or down beneath the earth or water level, to give the audience an intimate touch.

I know there is a very thin veil between comedy and tragedy ofttimes. It's fun to create such delicate situations, let them play with the emotions a moment or two, and then turn into a pleasant surprise. Maybe that's the Hitchcock touch, but to me it's fun.

I think one of the most important elements of present day pictures is casting players who don't look like actors or caricatures. If an audience can spot an actor as a villain in his first few scenes, his best work flops miserably. Not all villains look like villains and not all handsome men are romantic. I detest "obvious" actors and the suffering, pained, grimacing, groaning and broken-hearted actor. I have found that most people don't collapse or get hysterical in times of shock or great pain. They usually grin, grit their teeth and say but little. Hence, in my pictures you will be disappointed if you expect to find actors swooning right and left.

* * *

One of the most thrilling scenes I ever hoped to make is in my latest film, "Foreign Correspondent." I have tried to make it a breath-taking, shocking thing because in real life it would be. But because I believe that under such circumstances men and women facing seemingly certain death would fight to live, the characters face their peril with strength and fight and resistance. I think they'll win your admiration by demonstrating calmness and courage, not through theatrical fireworks.

The scene could have been done in one-third the film footage for one-tenth the cost if it had been done for physical effect alone. To create an emotional affinity between audience and players, however, we made the scene the hard way. I only hope the audience enjoys it as much as we did, trying to make the thrill seem actuality.

Marriage Meddlers

By ADELE GARRISON

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

As I hung up the receiver Katherine was close beside me, her fingers pressing my shoulders.

Then Katherine gave me her accolade.

"You've managed that so wisely, Madge," she said. "The Lansfield suite will be ideal for them, and I'll arrange by telephone with a mighty good physician to check up on them each day until he pronounces the danger of infection past. Then we can bring them home."

A shudder I could not repress rippled over me.

"If there's a home for them to come to," I said, and regretted the speech the moment it left my lips.

"Please forget that speech," I said, flushing. "I shouldn't have uttered it. I'm not really afraid that Jack Leslie will succeed in harming the house."

Lillian's comment was professionally reassuring.

"About one chance in a million," she said, "and your father's preparing for that. But I know why you're in a pessimistic mood. It isn't the scarlet fever scare, nor yet the Damoclean sword that Jack Leslie is keeping suspended over our heads."

"Lillian the Clairvoyant!" I scoffed, trying to disguise my very real anxiety. "Well! I'll give you a chance to exercise your powers. I haven't the slightest idea why I'm pessimistic. Suppose you tell me."

She flashed a gamin grin at me.

"I wish all the stunts I have to do were as easy," she said. "What's eating you is the prospect of having to telephone old Phil, and ask him to make arrangements to take care of the boys at the Lansfield."

For an instant her lucky guess —if it were that—so surprised me that I could not speak. Then I rallied my faculties and managed to smile at her sally.

"Yes, you're right," I answered. "Yet, I ought not to have any qualms. It's a request which ought not to give him any trouble—"

"Seeing that, as we've discovered, he owns the Lansfield, lock stock and barrel, or rather, building, managers and bell boys," she quipped. "But you are having the jitters, nevertheless. Look here! Would you like me to do it? I'd just as soon tackle him."

"No, thank you," I said. "I'm all right again, and after all, it's my job. I'll call him right away."

"No hurry," Lillian said comfortably. "It will be hours before the boys reach the Lansfield."

"I know," I said, "but—"

"You'd like to get it over with," Lillian finished for me. "Well! nobody can blame you for that."

"How fortunate it is we're all finished down here!" I said, looking around me. "I won't have to think of this again until we move everybody down. But — there is one thing I wish you would do for me."

"Name it!" Lillian declaimed theatrically. "If it means sacrificing my right arm, I'll tear it off at the shoulder."

"It may be almost as strenuous," I said, smiling. "I want to be sure that Mother Graham doesn't overhear this conversation. If one of you will see to it that she doesn't have her door open, I'll be grateful. She won't come down here because of my father's insistence upon our keeping to our own rooms, and her hearing isn't especially good—"

"Except for things which she isn't supposed to hear," Lillian commented.

HOROSCOPE

For Wednesday, August 28.

A very lively and enterprising day, with the forces and faculties keyed up to some worthwhile achievements, is read from the prevailing astral operations. The mentality will be disposed to be keen, alert and aggressive as well as being sound, purposeful and dependable, even though prone to be attracted by creative and expansive objectives of major proportions. In very determined attack the support of superiors, employers or those in power is assured.

Those whose birthday it is may prepare for a year of excellent opportunity for expansion and growth, especially where new ideas and projects of major importance are practically developed and aggressively attacked. This energetic and strenuous personal initiative may prove amply convincing to employers, superiors or those whose co-operation for promotion and development is essential. Group action is destined to be definite and decisive, particularly where social, humanitarian or even political issues are at stake.

A child born on this day should be energetic, enterprising, forceful and resourceful, attaining place and prestige by its personal initiative.

HAVE A CHANGE OF PACE

FINE BIDDERS vary tactics according to the kind of partners sitting opposite them. A bid which you might not think of making opposite an expert can be the very best when you have an inexperienced, unsound or thoughtless one playing with you. In such situations it is frequently best, when you hold a good hand, to bid on the basis of probabilities, depending on them rather than upon your partner's action, to get you into the best contract.

That bidding occurred at two tables of a duplicate game, where expert players were in the North, but it was risky with average ones. At another table South on his second turn feared it being dropped, so bid 3-Diamonds and North shifted it to 3-No Trumps. Where one player had an inexperienced partner in the North he bid 3-No Trumps on his second turn, on probabilities. He could count up eight sure tricks as soon as he got in, and required as a sure heart stopper nothing better than three hearts to the J or four to the 10—a very likely holding for North, since East did not support West's bid. It might be interpolated that West's bid was highly criticizable.

At two tables, the hand wound up in diamonds, at a less than game contract. In one case five were made because West started with two heart tricks, so that South was able to discard his only club loser on the heart J and 9. In the other, after West's heart K lead, he answered the discouraging signal of the 2 by shifting to his spade 6 to the 8, 9 and A. Declarer dropped trumps and led his heart Q. If West won this, South could then reach dummy with the spade K and play the other two hearts, trashing his club 7. But West ducked. Now South had to lose his club trick, so made only four diamonds. Can you figure out West's neat logic for letting the heart Q win?

Tomorrow's Problem.

CENSUS FIGURE WORRIES OHIO CONGRESSMEN

Reduction in Seat Number Threatened If State Growth Lags.

By EARL BERKLEY

WASHINGTON —(AP)— Ohioans are anxiously awaiting the 1940 census returns.

The population count might mean a reduction in the state's representation in congress. It depends apparently on whether Ohio's growth has kept pace with the country-wide gain, but this isn't expected.

Several Buckeye members are pondering whether to ask congress to change the method of apportionment if the new census cuts their number of seats.

Census returns to date indicate a shift that might reduce the state's house membership from 24 to 23 unless the population growth at least equals the national increase, or unless the apportionment law is changed.

Officials said figures on the Buckeye state's 1940 population would be completed within a few weeks.

Ohio's house seats were increased in 1932 from 22 to 24 on the basis of the 1930 census allowing one representative for each 281,000 population. The state's population then was 6,646,697.

Census bureau statisticians said indications were that the country's 1940 population would approximate 132,000,000. This would mean one representative for approximately each 300,000 population, and Ohio would need a population in excess of 7,000,000 in order to retain its 24 seats.

Preliminary estimates indicate the state's population increased by about 275,000 since 1930, a sizeable gain but not enough to assure retention of 24 house posts if the country's total population went to 131,000,000 or 132,000,000, necessitating an increase in the number of citizens for each member, under present law.

Census officials reported that the nation's average population gain since 1930 probably would be 6.5 per cent. Thus states which increased substantially more than that could look forward to getting more house seats. Those which failed to gain as much or declined might lose seats.

Ohio would face the latter prospect unless its 1940 population was around 7,200,000, house members believed.

The number of representatives for each portion of the population is determined by dividing the country's total by 435, the number of house members since 1910.

Congress can evolve any manner of apportionment it pleases. It could increase the total number of seats beyond 435, revise the percentage of population for each seat, or take other action to prevent a reduction in states such as Ohio.

There would be the problem, however, of making a revision acceptable to all states, particularly those which stood to gain seats by the new census.

In any event, reapportionment will not be made prior to this year's presidential elections. Even if congress decided not to change the present law, it is unlikely that new seating would go into effect before 1944.

Ohioans said they were confident of co-operation in any effort to prevent reductions in representation. They noted that a number of other states were in similar situations and suggested that there would be concerted agitation for congressional action.

Early returns indicate that shifts under the present apportionment system would mean loss of representation in several midwestern and northeastern states. The south and far west probably would get more votes in the house.

It was suggested that revision of apportionment already had been suggested to the house census committee, but members indicated that no action would be taken until the census had been completed.

County Receives $3,625 In State, U. S. Funds.

Richland county had received four checks for a total of $3,625 today, representing state and federal contributions to the county's aid for dependent children and aid for the blind programs.

The contributions included checks for $1,204 and $87 from the state and $1,964 and $369 from the federal government.

A third of the cost of the two programs is paid by the county with the federal and state governments providing equal portions of the other two-thirds.

Smoke Nuisance Hit By Citizens On Park Avenue

Sixth Ward residents in the vicinity of Park avenue east and Hedges street are complaining about the smoke nuisance in the neighborhood.

And they have decided to do something about it. Several petitions were obtained at City Hall yesterday and are being circulated among the residents on Park avenue, Glenn and Willis avenues and Hedges street.

The petitions which they expect to submit to council at its regular September meeting calls attention to smoke and soot in the neighborhood and asks council to take the necessary legislative action to alleviate the condition.

PROTECTOR

OMAHA, Neb. —(INS)— An ancient maple tree was spared last year after O. A. Leidahl contemplated cutting it down. It was too good a protector against the sun, he decided. Recently it proved a good protector against something more threatening. It stopped a runaway milk truck rolling down on five children, among them Leidahl's son and grandson. "If it hadn't been for that tree, they would have all been killed," Mrs. Leidahl said.

TELLS HISTORY OF EMPLOYMENT SERVICE BEFORE GALION ROTARY

GALION—Harold Leech, manager of the local state employment bureau, addressed the Galion Rotary club at its meeting Monday night at the Maxwell House.

He told of the past activities of employment service, and stated that this is the 50th anniversary year of the service. It was started in 1890 as a state agency with only five offices. At that time it was a labor organization service. In 1917 it was organized under the national defense commission and 13 offices were added at that time. After the war, federal support was withdrawn, and then it reverted to state up-keep, Leech said.

In 1936, the federal employment service was started. The speaker said that there are now 47 full time offices in Ohio, and a number of extension offices that are open several days in a week.

Leech stated that defense training under the present employment bureau is working through the state board of education and federal employment service. After training is completed by the men, they are reclassified in the local offices and given different ratings, and may rate several classifications instead of one of just a few. They are then prepared for a wider scope of work and better jobs.

Visitors at the meeting were E. R. Pickering of Galion, James C. Snyder and Paul E. Jones of the Cardington club; and William Webster of Aurora, New York.

There will be no meeting next Monday night, but Ladies' Night will be observed on September 9th.

OFFER LOW BID ON SEWER JOB

Darling and Son Agree To Build Lincoln Heights Line For $865.30.

R. O. Darling and Son, Mansfield contractors, apparently were low bidders today on the construction of a storm sewer on Indiana avenue in Lincoln Heights, but county commissioners withheld the awarding of the contract until next week.

Commissioners yesterday opened six bids on the project, two of them identical.

The R. O. Darling firm bid $865.30 on the materials and labor, while Roger Au, Mansfield, submitted a bid for $953, and R. H. Metz, Shelby, was high at $971.99.

Voegele Brothers and M. L. Branyon and Brothers, Mansfield, offered to furnish materials only for $264.15. The county, however, asked for bids on both materials and labor.

The storm sewer, which will be constructed along the east side of Indiana avenue, will be 1,092 feet long. Total cost of the work was estimated at $1,035.

HOSPITAL CARE FOR INDIGENTS COSTS $5,098

Charges to City Averaging $725 Monthly; Crafton Sees Fund Exhausted.

Hospitalization of indigent patients during the first seven months of 1940 has cost the city a total of $5,098, it was reported today by Service-Safety Director C. M. Crafton.

At the present rate of the expenditures — an average of $725 monthly—the total bill at the end of the year will amount to $8,700.

Cost of maintaining the health of persons who are unable to provide their own hospital expense is in addition to other convalescent care, invalid car service and funerals that the city pays annually in connection with the administration of poor relief.

City council set up only $15,000 in the annual appropriations bill at the first of the year to cover the entire expense and Crafton today expressed doubt if the funds would be enough to cover the cost.

Hospitalization and medical service for indigents has annually exceeded appropriations Crafton said.

Crafton's report from Dr. Roy C. Rehder, city-county health commissioner showed that 151 patients have been hospitalized during the past seven months, the average cost per patient totaling $34.

The city has a contract with the General hospital for medical and surgical care calling for a daily rate of $4.75 per patient.

Dr. Rehder's report revealed that 1,287 patients days have been recorded so far this year, and that a total of 67 X-rays have been taken for indigents.

Of the total amount spent, $4,517 has gone to the General hospital and $581 to the Eleanor Thomas hospital, now the Richland county Tuberculosis hospital.

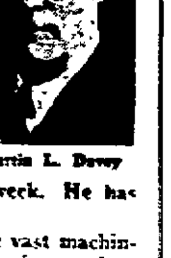
Chiseling The Unemployed Under Bricker

The Unemployment Insurance Law was passed under the Davey administration, in December 1936, to conform to the Federal law. It was intended to provide $15 a week for those who were temporarily unemployed, through no fault of their own. Bricker chiseled them down to $4, $5, and $6 a week, sometimes as low as $1.50 or $2 a week. He has been inhuman.



Martin L. Davey

Davey set up the vast machinery for the handling of unemployment insurance on a businesslike basis, and on the advice of insurance experts. So good a job was done in organizing this department under Davey, that Ohio was the only State in the Union that was ready to pay benefits on time.

Under Davey's administration, the employees were selected by Civil Service. The United States Social Security Board provided $92,000.00 for the Civil Service examinations. Thousands of Ohio citizens paid their money in good faith to take these examinations. The Social Security Board supervised this. The selections were made according to law.

The first thing Bricker did was to pass a "ripper" law to get immediate political control of the unemployment insurance program. He promptly fired hundreds of Civil Service employees, who had a right to the positions under the law, and who had the experience to do the work properly. He filled these places with Bricker politicians, irrespective of merit.

The present Governor has shown a brazen contempt for Civil Service laws and all other laws. His attitude seems to be that he personally owns the State government. If laws are in his way, he still rules with a ruthless hand.

But the worst thing about his high-handed mismanagement of unemployment insurance is his cruel and brutal attitude toward the helpless unemployed. This is a humanitarian law. It was intended to help people, and not grind them down, because they were unlucky enough to be out of work temporarily.

Davey left more than $125,000,000.00 in the Ohio Unemployment Insurance Fund in the United States Treasury. Bricker is piling up still more Ohio money by cheating the unemployed. Why leave all this Ohio money in Washington? It helps no Ohio people there. Let's be a little more generous with the unemployed. Make the law humane and fair. It will help Ohio merchants, landlords, doctors, dentists, etc.

But above all it should be made to help, and not starve, the unemployed. Davey will make this law humane, and generous, and just.
